NEW HOLE TORN THROUGH NAZI LINE

Income Tax Postwar Cut Is Demanded By Dewey

Outlines Six-Point Program and Assails New Deal for Many Revenue Law Changes

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 3 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey proposed tonight the reduction of individual and corporation income levies as a part of a complete overhaul of the Federal tax system he said must be accomplished after the war to remove "a road-block in the way of progress."

In an address prepared for delivery over a Nation-wide radio hookup (Mutual) the Republican presidential nominee asserted that while the Nation cheerfully pays high taxes to meet the cost of the war, its peacetime objectives of expansion and recovery could not be obtained "by taxes which eat into the income of those who are already below a decent American standard of living."

Assailing the New Deal for what he said were 15 changes in the revenue laws in 12 years, he proposed a six-point program if the Republicans win in November.

The text of his address follows:

This year more than 50 million Americans are paying income taxes. The man who makes as little as $11 a week now pays an income tax.

So taxes today are mighty important to every one of us. They are important because the amount of taxes taken out of your pay envelopes decides how much will be left to take home.

Taxes are also important because tax laws can either destroy our job making machinery or can permit it to go to work. And jobs, after the war, will be a first objective of your new national Administration.

Sets Objectives

In speeches over the radio within the past few weeks, I have made constructive proposals for achieving our great objectives for the years ahead. These are some of the things we must do if we are to be successful both here at home after this war end in doing our share in bringing a lasting peace to the world.

As we all know, it took a war to get jobs under the present national Administration. The New Deal was in office from 1933 until 1940 when the war finally reduced unemployment. Now, how is it that the New

Winter Plagues Cut 75 to 90% By Sulfa Drug

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—From 75 to 90 per cent of winter's common respiratory diseases have been prevented in more than 600,000 servicemen by use of a small daily dose of sulfadiazine.

This is the longest medical step yet made toward turning winter into summer, as to disease, and was reported to the American Public Health Association today by Comdr. Alvin F. Coburn, Navy, Washington, and Capt. Richard C. Hodges, Army Air Forces, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

In the Navy, more than 600,000 men were given the sulfa preventive. In the Army Air Forces 50,000. In both groups large numbers of men were given nothing, to compare with and validate the sulfa results. In both groups the results were almost identical.

Scarlet fever and strep throat were reduced by 85 per cent. All other streptococcus infections were similarly reduced. Meningitis was wiped out in some camps and reduced to almost zero everywhere. Rheumatic fever and pneumonia dropped markedly.

Furthermore, the ability of the streptococcus diseases to spread from one center to another was virtually stopped.

The common cold and other respiratory infections were also strikingly decreased. But there is a puzzle concerning the common cold. Neither report is sure that the cold reductions were due to the sulfa drug.

Colds are supposed to be caused by a virus, rather than by germs. Both reports agreed that sufadiazine apparently does not affect the virus.

Pay Rise Plan Put Off Until After Election

Roosevelt Reported As Disappointing AFL, CIO Leaders

"The "Little Steel" wage formula apparently will remain intact until after the election.

This was the word that spread through Government agencies yesterday in the wake of President Roosevelt's Friday conference with the top leaders of the AFL and CIO.

Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson was said to have assured congressional leaders that no action will be taken by President Roosevelt on the wage front until after the election.

Labro Chiefs Glum

And the glum faces of the labor chiefs as they left the White House conference was interpreted as abundant evidence that the President had bluntly told them that he would not act before the November 7 election.

Administration advisers have decided, it was said, that the President has the labor vote sewed up and doesn't needto do anything more to woo it. To issue an order smashing the "Little Steel" formula before the election might provide basis for a charge that the President was trying to "buy" the election, it was said in some Administration quarters.

Labor officials were plainly displeased by the apparent presidential decision, but they did not think they could do very much about it. There was a fear expressed in some quarters that the President might reject the demands to smash the formula in mid-November, but promise to permit a general increase in wage rates when Germany collapses and overtime work is eliminated.

Such a development might deprive the CIO steel workers of

Extra Goods, Reconversion Bills Signed

Law Does Not Deal Adequately With "Human" Problem, Roosevelt Says

By Ben W. Gilbert

President Roosevelt yesterday approved bills setting up an overall reconversion agency and a surplus property board, but issued statements making it clear that he was not entirely pleased with either of the measures which he signed into law.

"I feel it is my duty to draw attention to the fact that the bill does not adequately deal with the human side of reconversion," the President said with respect to the measure which expands the present Office of War Mobilization into an Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion with broad powers.

The bill to handle the disposition of our estimated 100 billion dollars ni. surplus property was signed with "considerable reluctance," the President said, because "there is danger that the confused methods of disposition and the elaborate restrictions imposed by the bill will, in many instances, delay, rather than expedite reconversion and reemployment."

Byrnes to Serve to Nov. 14

The President designated War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes to seve as head of the new OWMR until November 14 when the Senate will go back into session, but indicated that he will nominate someone else for the two year term in the $15,000 a year job. Senate confirmation is necessary.

Byrnes has expressed a desrie to return to private life as soon as a successor is confirmed. Praising Byrnes for a "magnificent job," since he left the Supreme Court two years ago, the President said, "I have assured him that I will not ask him to serve as director beyond the interim term."

Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson is believed to be in the lead for the job. OPA Administrator Chester Bowles also has received some consideration.

Surplus Goods Jobs Unfilled

The President did not nominate anyone to fill the three $12,000-a-year jobs on the surplus property board, or to the 12-man industry-agriculture-labor-public OWMR advisory board. It was assumed that these nominations would not be sent to the Senate until after the election.

Will L. Clayton, who now heads the Surplus War Property Administration, which was established by executive order on February 21, 1943, has announced that he will not serve on the new surplus property board because he believes the legislated machinery unworkable. SWPA will die when the board is named and confirmed.

The reconvversion measure also gave legislative basis to the Retraining and Replacement Administration now headed by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administration. The measure specifically authorizes the President to reappoint Hines to the $12,000 a year job, but there was no information on whether Hines or someone eals would be designated.

More Benefits Favored

In discussing the reconversion measure, the President pointed out that conferees had sidetracked Senate-approved provisions to provide transportation to stranded war workers back to their homes, unemployment compensation for Government workers, and set minimum standards to govern the amount and duration of unemployment benefits. He expressed the hope

The Rev. Matthew Ernest Hansel, 71, retired Presbyterian minister of 1944 Juniper st. nw., was killed instantly yesterday afternoon when he was struck by a truck at 18th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw. He was the District's sixty-fifth traffic fatality this year.

The Rev. Mr. Hansel was crossing 18th st. when struck, police said. He was pronounced dead at the scene by an Emergency Hospital staff doctor. The truck, the property of the U. S. Government and assigned to the General Accounting Office, was operated by Clarence L. Hodge, Negro, 32, of 130 53d st. se., according to police.

The accident caused Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to issue a warning to both pedestrians and drivers to be more careful about traffic regulations during the inclement winter weather.

Drivers were asked to proceed slowly and to watch out for pedestrians, while pedestrians were asked to cross only at crosswalks and to be particularly careful when carrying open umbrellas.

The Rev. Mr. Hansel, a Presbyterian minister in North Carolina for 40 years, was retired in 1940 and came to Washington about two years ago. A native of Highland County, Va., he was a graduate of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., and of the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Hansel, he is survived by four daughters: Miss Margaret Hansel

PAC Termed Communists' Active Front

Dies Group Prober Makes Accusations Against 82 Leaders

By the Associated Press

Referring to the National Citizen's Political Action Committee as "the most active" Communist front organization in the United States, J. B. Matthews told a Dies subcommittee yesterday that 82 of the NCPAC's 141 members had previously cooperated with organizations denounced by the Attorney General as "subversive or Communist."

"Here, if ever, is a Communist front organization," said Matthews, Dies committee research director, after testifying that the NCPAC was the successor of the CIO Political Action Committee. He stated that "on the basis of past performance," it could be expected that the individuals he listed would "follow the Communist line."

Matthews explained that the 82 may not necessarily have been members of the organization denounced by the Attorney General, but said they had "cooperated voluntarily" with them by contributing money, aiding in programs, or otherwise.

Bor's Army Quits Fight For Warsaw

Thousands Flee To Soviet Lines As All Supplies Become Exhausted

London, Oct. 3 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Tadeusz Komorowski (Bor) today announced his underground army's resistance in Warsaw had ended after a 68-day struggle in which thousands of patriots were killed and the city was reduced to a shambles.

Moscow newspapers said a Polish officer who escaped reported thousands of insurgents had crossed the Vistula River to Russian lines.

"There is on longer any resistance in any part of Warsaw," he said. "Warsaw is as greatly destroyed as Stalingrad."

The Germans announced the "insurrection collapsed." They claim 24,000 prisoners.

Komorowski's communique said: 'Warsaw has fallen after exhausting all supplies of food and ammunition on the sixty-third day of fighting in the face of overwhelming enemy superiority. On October 2 at 8 p. m., orders were given to cease fire."

Battle Divided Allies

Warsaw patriots, their hopes fired by the approach of the Red army to the eastern banks of the Vistula and the suburbs of Warsaw, brought out their long-hidden arms and turned on the Germans on August 1.

The battle became a major issue in inter-Allied relations, and the Germans seized upon it for propaganda to drive a wedge between Russia and the United States and Britain.

The struggle widened the gulf between Russia and the Polish government in exile in London. The London Poles and the Soviet-sponsored Polish National Committee of Liberation accused one another of responsibility for the ill-fated uprising.

Throughout, the Russians stood firmly behind the Liberation Committee, and Washington and London backed the London regime.

Living in Holes

Polish sources in London said the people of Warsaw had been living in holes beneath the rubble, lacking food and water, and suffering from epidemics of dysentery, typhoid and scarlet fever.

These were the conditions which prevailed, a spokesman for the London government said, when General Komorowski, a few hours before the capitulation, informed the government a mercy truce had been arranged to permit evacuation of civilians. The city had a prewar population of 1,225,000.

How many were slain may never be known, but estimates range up to 250,000.

The London exile government said the patriot army consisted of about 30,000 originally.

General's Whereabouts Uncertain

Whether General Komorowski was among the prisoners was uncertain. Poland's military headquarters in London said the general, who was named commander

First Army Now Moving To Outflank Aachen Ruins

Breach Is 12 Miles North of Old Wedge; Resistance Varies, Leaders Report

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Oct. 3. (AP).—Powerful elements of the U. S. First Army have smashed a 4-mile gap through the Siegfried line north of Aachen, 12 miles north of the first Allied wedge driven into the massive German fortifications, and tonight more men and armor were driving to outflank the ruined stronghold of Aachen.

"The attack continues and advances are being made against varying resistance," supreme headquarters said late tonight.

The twin penetrations of the Siegfried Line were 30 miles from Cologne at one point and 32 miles from Dusseldorf at the other.

"We are definitely through the old Siegfried Line," declared an American officer. "We have our second major breach. There still are fortifications and antitank defenses ahead of us which the Germans built recently," he added.

Main Highway Threatened

In a spectacular 36-hour drive the doughboys—virtually without air support—captured Ubach, 9 miles north of Aachen and 3 below Geilenkirchen, and drove the Germans from the moated twelfth century castle of Rimberg on the German-Dutch border. Thirty-nine enemy pillboxes were knocked out and between 400 and 500 prisoners captured in furious fighting.

The first gap in the Siegfried defenses was driven just below Aachen at the outset of the invasion of Germany. The newest breakthrough placed Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' troops almost astride a main highway running north from Aachen to Geilenkirchen.

All along the Aachen front the battle flamed, with the Nazis trying desperately to close the breaches in the defenses of the Rhineland. For the last two days the enemy was purely on the defensive, despite the fact that Allied air support was being hampered by weather.

No "Dragon's Teeth" Barriers

Ubach, captured after furious house-to-house fighting, is but 10 miles from the important German communications center of Julich, whence hard-surfaced highways lead 20 miles to the industrial cities of Cologne and Dusseldorf on the Rhine.

(A broadcast by the German DNB news agency declared the Allied attack near Aachen was "nothing but local reconnaissance thrusts supported by artillery" and said the Allied pressure in that sector apparently was designed merely to prevent the Nazis from sending armored reinforcements against the British Second

The President Explains

Japs Advancing on Foochow; U. S. Aid to China Defended

"Hell of a Lot" Delivered Monthly, Newsmen Are Told

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt, stepping into a quarrel between Chungking and Prime Minister Churchill, disclosed for the first time yesterday the amount of supplies American transport planes are now carrying from upper Burma over the Himalayan "hump" into China. He said the amount was over 20,000 tons a month, compared to only 2000 or 3000 tons a month a year and a half ago.

Mr. Roosevelt told reporters that, in view of all the difficulties involved, this was a hell of a lot of supplies. He said it was the equivalent of a voyage a month by two 10,000-ton cargo ships, and he expressed the opinion that the work being done by the transport planes flying over the Himalayas would be written up as an epic.

The question came up at a White House news conference when a reporter asked for comment, first, on a statement by Prime Minister Churchill in his speech in Commons the other day and, second, on the reply by a spokesman for the Chinese Military Council in Chungking.

Surpasses Burma Road

Mr. Churchill told Parliament that American planes, flying over the "terrible Himalayas," were carrying into China "many times as much as the Burma Road ever carried in its palmiest days . . ." The Prime Minister went on to note with keen regret that, in spite of the "lavish American help," China had suffered severe military reverses.

The Prime Minister's statement, according to a dispatch from Chungking, caused "smoldering resentment." Finally, on Monday, a spokesman for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government said United States aid had been pitifully inadequate. He said the total ton-

Surprise Landing Seen Move to Block Allied Invasion

Chungking, Oct. 3 (AP).—Imperial headquarters in Tokyo announced today Japanese troops are driving on Foochow, last big seaport in Chinese hands, after a "surprise landing" in Fukien Province.

The enemy push toward the city of 400,000 population on China's east coast was regarded by observers here as a logical action to counter any American plans for a landing, and indicated possible Japanese nervousness over such an intention.

(Japanese press and radio reports, recorded by FCC monitors, stated the sea-borne landings were made to thwart American "plans to land on the China coast from the Pacific and sever our communications with the southern region.")

The Chinese high command made no comment on the Fukien landings, which Tokyo said occurred last Friday, and reported no change in the Kwangsi sector, where the Japanese are driving toward Kweilin.

Clyde A. Farnsworth, Associated Press correspondent, said in a dispatch October 1 from Kweilin that the Japanese were reported within 14 miles of the city, but added that its defenders were well-equipped with United States ammunition and supplies and that Chinese commanders were confident the

Falls Church Man Found Guilty of . Jail Rape Attempt

Ellicott City, Md., Oct. 3 (AP).—Elmer F. Putnam, 28, of Falls Church, Va., was convicted yesterday in Howard County Circuit Court of assaulting with intent to rape a 14-year-old girl.

Putnam was accused of attacking the girl last July 4 in the warden's quarters of the Ellicott City Jail, where he was serving a sentence for a traffic violation. The girl had been detained on a charge of having falsified her age in seeking a marriage license. Putnam was a trusty.

E. Russell Moxley, Howard County police chief, testified that upon bringing a prisoner to the jail July 4, he heard screams and upon going to the third floor, found Putnam attacking the girl. The warden and his wife were absent at the time, Moxley said.

Sentence was withheld by Judge James Clark after the jury returned its verdict following an hour of deliberation.

Babies Will Have to Wait

British Red Tape Ties Stork, Keeps Tommies, Wives Apart

By Bruce W. Munn

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The stork was taking a beating tonight in the battle of "the baby leave committee."

It started when disgruntled British troops in the Middle East applied for transfer home, stating in no uncertain terms they wanted to "have a baby before the old woman gets too old."

Investigation disclosed many Tommies had been away from home two and three years. So, a committee was formed to handle the applications and weed out the men who didn't yearn for fatherhood, but just figured to get in on a good thing.

The committee was named "the Middle East compassionate posting committee." Posting, in British army terminology, means to put a man up for leave. The name was shortened to "the baby leave committee."

The committee was composed of three officers, a sergeant and a private volunteer and that was the first mistake. Sir James Grigg, Seretary of State for War, said red-facedly in Commons today the committee should have kept its work a secret.

Before the committee settled to its responsibilities it was snowed under with applications from 5336 Tommies, every one fired with a sudden desire to become a father.

At first the committee took it all with British aplomb. Then it gave up. It realized it should have kept the leave-to-end-all-leaves scheme a secret and just merely reclassify some of the older soldiers so they could get back to Britain and start raising a family.

A new committee of five officers and five other ranks was formed. It finally weeded out all but 2669 prime prospective daddies.

Then the committee ran into a shipping crisis. Only 200 or 300 men could be transferred to Britain each month.

The embarrassed war office began catching it from the wives at

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—His majesty's government has taken steps to alleviate a shortage responsible for a loud outcry from young Britishers—that of rubber nipples for nursing bottles—Parliament was informed today.

'Unshaken by Bunkshooters'

Court Awards Custody of Child To 'Two Good Old Pioneers'

Tallahassee, Fla., Oct. 3 (AP).—The Supreme Court said today that "science and electronics" have not devised a better place to rear a child than the home of "two good old pioneers" whose "spiritual anchorage was not shaken by the dishwater causistries of bunkshooters."

The court declined to take a 9-year-old boy from the grandparents who reared him and award custody to his father, who it said had "voluntarily abdicated his responsibility for him at the threshold of his life."

The court said the child was released to the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hart of Santa Rosa County, soon after it was born. Later, the parents were divorced. The boy's mother now is dead. The father, Sherman W. Howell, and his second wife recently sued to obtain custody of the boy.

Justice Glenn Terrell, who wrote the opinion, likening the grandparents to pioneers said:

"It is said that they were a little narrow in their approach but they were more sincere in their loyalties. They were not versed in Latin and Greek but they swore by the efficacy of quinine and calomel and brought up one of the most stable generations of sons and daughters that this country has produced.

"I never saw one who did not own a Bible, a good rifle and a sharp knife . . .

"Science and electronics may some day devise a better environment in which to bring up a boy but until they do, we will not cast aside that which has stood the test."

Landing Field Shelled

Allied Landing on Crete Reported as Siege Begins

Rome, Oct. 3 (AP).—Crete was under Allied siege today and the Morocco Radio said, without confirmation, that strong forces had landed in the northwestern section to wrest away the island which Hitler won with much German blood in the spring of 1941.

Naval headquarters announced the British cruiser Black Prince shelled the Malme airdrome Saturday, apparently to knock out the field from which big Junkers transports have been evacuating key personnel of the Crete garrison.

The danger of the German position on Crete was heightened by Allied seizure of Kythera, an island between Crete and the Greek mainland, from which the enemy garrison of 150 men fled after destroying its radio station.

Germans were reported withdrawing from a number of small islands along the southern fringes of Greece.

The Allied command said troops, gun positions and shipping were bombed at Port Zara, on the Dalmatian coast. Other aircraft struck at small shipping in the northern Adriatic and the gulf of Genoa. One enemy plane was destroyed.

War Sidelights

British Search Spanish Ships For High Nazi

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Every Spanish ship bound from Europe in recent weeks has been searched by British warships to satisfy Allied authorities no Nazi leaders or other Germans are aboard trying to flee to a neutral sanctuary, it was disclosed in Commons today by the Ministry of Economic Warfare.

The inspections were imposed as a condition of their obtaining a navicert, the permit required of neutrals to prevent contraband reaching the enemy.

In the House of Lords, Lord Simon said Argentina had given assurance she would not harbor Axis war criminals but that the British government is doing everything to see that guilty Germans and their loot won't reach "the Argentine or and other destination outside Europe."

Windsor Lauded

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.). — The London Daily Express editorially praised the Duke of Windsor as a "loyal, devoted servant" today in a rare instance of comment on the former British King by a London newspaper.

"He has faithfully upheld the British cause in his lonely outpost," the editorial said. "He has given no cause for unhappiness in the years of separation.

"His office does not permit spectacular service. It calls for conscientious application and patient skill. The Duke of Windsor has shown wisdom in his decisions and great dignity in his bearing. The people of these islands remember him with kindliness."

Six Fliers Quit Nazis

Two light German military planes landed Sunday on the Swedish island of Gotland and the crews—six Estonians—stated they had been sent into battle against the Russians but decided to drop their bombs in the Baltic and fly to Sweden instead, the British Broadcasting Corporation said yesterday. The broadcast said five German planes manned by Estonians had landed on Swedish territory during the past few days.

Russians 37 Miles From Belgrade After a Gain of 24

London (Wednesday), Oct. 4 (AP). Mo5scow announced today the Red army had opened a second front in Yugoslaiva today, breaking into the country along a 55-mile front north and east of Belgrade and driving to within 37 miles of the Yugoslav capital, already reported under virtual siege of Marshal Tito's Partisans.

Welding an arc around Belgrade to the northeast, the Russians captured the communications centers of Petrovgrad and Bela Crvka, 40 miles north and 40 miles east of the capital, and a dozen towns and railway stations in between, including Ulma, just 37 milees from Belgrade.

The Russian drive penetérated 24 miles into Yugoslavia at Petrovgrad.

Tito Joins Reds

Marshal Tito's headquarters declared Monday the Red army had joined units of his Fourteenth Partisan Corps in a converging drive on Belgrade.

The first invasion of Yugoslavia, announced Saturday, was continued on a north-south front beginning 50 miles east of the new drive, and carried to a depth of 22 miles westward with capture of the town of Rudna Glava, 36 miles southwest of the Romanian border town of Turnu Severin.

The Russians also announced capture of the Estonian island of Ristna by amphibious forces bent on ending Germany's domination of the Baltic Sea. Ristna, one of four islands commanding entrances to the Gulfs of Riga and Finland, was taken by troops of Marshal Leonid Govorov's Leningrad army, who captured the island of Vormsi September 27 and won Muhu three days later.

Now Need Ony Saare

Now the Russiians need possession only of Saare, largest of the four islands, to give the Red fleet clear sailiing in the Baltic, where it can be employed to invade East Prussia.

The southern drive into Yugoslavia threatens the communications city of Nis, capture of which would cut the last Nazi escape routes from the Balkans.

Romanian troops were believed participating, and Col. Ernest von Hammer, Nazi radio military analyst, mentioned the presence of motorized Bulgarian formations.

Berlin placed the Russian strength at five infantry divisions, probably more than 50,000 men.

retroactive pay back to December, 1943.

At his press conference yesterday the President disclosed that he had conferred with a number of representatives of industry and would confer with others on the question of wage policy. He declined to reveal the names of those he has conferred with already, because, he said, to do so might create invidious distinctions.

Board hearings on the wage question are slated to continue through Friday. Next week, the board will go into executive session to begin consideration of the record of two weeks of hearings.

More Conferences Probable

When the board completes its deliberations—in a week or ten days at the earliest—it is expected to report to President Roosevelt. Presumably, the President would confer on the matter with the board and with Vinson.

It was also possible that he would hold further conferences with industry and labor representatives.

All these developments could easily take the case beyond November 7.

However, if Gov. Thomas E. Dewey should make unexpected gains in the ranks of labor, the President could still change his strategy, order the agencies to prepare their reports with all speed, and grant the wage demands before election.

Foochow once before was in Japanese hands, in April, 1939, but was retaken by the Chinese.

Private reports reaching Chungking said there were signs the Japanese were preparing to open an offensive on Sian from Honan and Shansi Province bases. It was suggested here that the invaders might eventually smash toward Chungking from the north and south.

Headquarters announced that United States Fourteenth Air Force bombers had attacked 11 towns and cities and had pounded Jap columns in support of Chinese attempting to check the invaders' drive on Kweilin.

that Congress would "promptly rectify" the defects in the measure.

"We have rightly committed ourselves to a fair and generous treatment of our GI men and women," the President said. "We have rightly committed ourselves to a prompt and generous policy of contract settlement to aid industry to return to peacetime work. We have rightly committed ourselves to support farm prices at a fair level during the period of reconversion. We should be no less fair in our treatment of our warworkers."

The President said he signed the surplus measure because of the need to prepare plans.

"I have therefore concluded," he said, "that it would be best to let the bill become law in the hope that after the Surplus Property Board provided for in the bill has had some experience in operating under it, the Congress will give careful consideration to needed changes which may be suggested by the board."

An official of the SWPA expressed dismay that the President had failed to name the surplus board. He said that the passage of the legislation had stalled the SWPA and left agency employes confused about their responsibilities and authority.

State Payment Of Soldiers' Poll Taxes Defended

Richmond, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Attorney General A. P. Staples, arguing today before the State Supreme Court of Appeals in the test case of the War Voters Acts, contended the real question involved was whether the payment of the poll tax for those in the armed forces violates the spirit of the constitution.

It was unthinkable, the attorney general said, that the General Assembly should not be able to take care of the matter of enabling servicemen to vote. He said other provisions of the constitution weigh the necessity of poll-tax payment by those paid pensions for war service, and the General Assembly could have granted pensions now for soldiers of the present war.

Staples, referring to an argument in the brief filed by Robert B. Tunstall, Norfolk attorney representning State officials bringing the test case, said the provisions of the 1944 acts were distinctly for persons in military service and not for other groups.

home and the troops in the Middle East. It feverishly issued "several orders" stating the men must have certificates from doctors saying they were able to become fathers and that their wives must be over 35. As one committee officer said, men whose dives are under 35 "have a boxful of time in which to become parents."

That's where the war office last left the situation.

Meanwhile the stork is getting pretty tired of waiting on one leg.

Army spearhead frontier farther north in Holland.)

Siegfried Line defenses in the sector now under attack include many antitank ditches, but the doughboys ran into none of the big concrete "dragon's teeth" barriers through which they fought south of Aachen. The Nazi defenders appeared to have few good antitank guns, and some enemy prisoners complained that their version of the bazooka was not effective against American tanks at much more than 50 yards.

Hundreds of RAF heavy bombers using 12,000-pound bombs tore open a seawall guarding the Dutch Island of Walcheren and sent the North Sea pouring over Nazi fortifications which have denied use of the Belgian port of Antwerp to the Allies.

The 'earthquake" bombs breache

The "earthquake" bombs breached the dike near the village of West Capalle, on the southwestern tip of Walcheren, sending a great sheet of water spreading over Eisenhower warned Dutch civilians on Monday to evacuate the island.

To the south in France, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's American Third Army, employing flamethrowers, was reported to have fought into Fort Driant, a man bastion of the formidable system of the Nazi fortresses guarding Metz.

While doughboys stormed Fort Driant under machinegun fire, Patton's artillery and American divebombers maintained a heavy assault on the entire Metz area. A dispatch from Edward Ball, Associated Press front correspondent, said:

"Soon after the first wave of doughboys stormed across a moat into Fort Driant, Nazi prisoners, many of them badly mangled, began streaming to the rear. Some enemy forces attempting to escape from the fort across the Moselle were caught by our artillery and annihilated."

A lull settled over the British Second Army front in Holland as the Germans temporarily, at least, abandoned their armored counterattacks against Lieut. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's salient in the Nijmegen area.

There likewise was little activity back along the Belgian-Holland border, except for a Canadian success in knocking the Nazis out of Merxem, a suburb of Antwerp.

nage of American supplies to the Chinese army in eastern China "from Pearl Harbor to the present" would not suffice to "sustain a single British or American division in combat for one week."

The Chinese spokesman added that the strength of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's United States Fourteenth Air Force in China was "so small it would hardly be credited if it could be disclosed."

President Roosevelt, answering this statement yesterday, said General Chennault's fliers had wrought considerable destructoin to Japanese ships, not only along the Chinese coast but in Chinese rivers. He said that this, too, would be one of the epics that would be written up.

Points Out Difficulties

The President, in answering the Chungking blast about pitifully inadequate supplies, said it came down to a definition of what was large or small. He pointed out that it was impossible to get supplies into China by boat, since the Japanese control the coast of China.

Therefore, Mr .Roosevelt continued, there remained only two ways of getting into China. One was the overland route, starting from the Caspian Sea near the top end of India and leading across the desert and Tibet to Chungking. Some goods are being transported over this route, the President said, but he emphasized that it was a terribly long and difficult journey in which the trucks had to carry gasoline from one stop to another.

Reminding the newsmen that the Japanese had destroyed the Burma road about the time we got into the war, President Roosevelt told how we started the air route across the Himalayas.

He said that, at first, the tonnage was small, but was built up constantly. A year ago it was only 2000 or 3000 tons a month. Then, by heroic effort, it was increased a year ago to 10,000 tons a month, and now it has been built up to more than 20,000 tons a month.

'Amazing Performance'

Mr. Roosevelt thought this was an amazing performance.

He said that the supplies flown over the mountains consisted of gasoline for General Chennault's planes and for the long-range B-29's, medical supplies, bombs and other munitions.

"What part of the 20,000 tons is put in Chinese hands as against our own requirements?" the President was asked.

He replied that a large part was gasoline for Chennault and for the B-29's. Take out that item, he said, nad most of the rest was for the Chinese.

Asked why the Chinese should complain as they had, the President chuckled and said they would like to have more. He said there was nothing new in that, and added that the Chinese naturally would not be satisfied until they were getting more.

The President would not comment on the quarrel between the Poles and the Russians. He said he thought he knew as much about it as any American, but he didn't feel that he knew enough about it to do any talking.

in chief of Polish forces only last week, had been at the head of his troops within the city.

On the other hand the liberation committee, which has denounced Komorowski as a "war criminal" responsible for the uprising and like the Germans placed a price on his head, has said he was in hiding miles away.

[Polish quarters here, the United Press reported, repudiated the Soviet-supported group's charge that the uprising was premature, and said it was justified because the roar of Russian guns was plainly audible in the capital. It was pointed out that the Germans were planning a counterattack by six divisions east of the suburb of Praga and that four of these divisions were held back by the Partisans in the city.

[The same quarters said the uprising was worthwhile because it cut the only Vistula River crossing for 40 miles by severing three bridges spanning the river and thus delayed the planned German attack on the Russians.—Editor's note.]

the CIO executive board, was named by Matthews as having been affiliated with 14⁸ "Communist front" groups and was described as "perhaps entitled to the rank of indispensable man in Communist front organizations."

Matthews put into the record a memorandum of Attorney General Biddle in deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, a member of the CIO executive board, listing 25 "front organizations." He said the memorandum was based on FBI findings after Representative Thomas (R., N. J.) commented: "I don't put any reliance in what the Attorney General says."

"To my way of thinking," said Thomas, who is conducting the hearings with Representative Costello (D., Calif.), "the Attorney General and these Communists are bed-fellows and nobody can deny it."

The list of NCPAC members which he checked, Matthews testified, was submitted to the House Campaign Expenditures Committee last month by Sidney Hillman, CIO leader who heads NCPAC, active in behalf of a fourth term for President Roosevelt.

Once Anti-Roosevelt

Many of the 82 members he listed, Matthews said, belonged to the American peace mobilization movement and were anti-Roosevelt before Germany attacked Russia.

Matthews put into the record the names of these individuals whom he said were members of the NCPAC and had been affiliated with one or more "Communist-front" organizations:

DEWEY

Deal managed to make a three year depression last nearly 11 years? Why, with all its borrowing and spending, with all its emergencies and unlimited powers, were there still 10 million unemployed in the spring of 1940?

One of the most important reasons was that our present administration never once established a policy of encouraging people to do business. It never once had a stable ploicy that allowed people to make plans, to go ahead and carry them out. Our tax laws should be the most stable. They have been the most unstable. Consider just one startling fact. The New Deal changed our tax laws 15 times in 12 years. It actually passed two revenue acts that were out of date before they could even go into effect, because new laws had been passed in the meantime.

Uncertain Future

How in the world can people plan ahead when they don't know from one month to the next what their taxes are going to be?

Moreover, under this administration these laws have even been used to discourage high wages. Here is an example. The Lincoln Electric Company is a long established firm which manufactures electrical equipment. It employs 1300 highly skilled and productive workers who have enjoyed high wages for years. In 1941 those 1300 employes made an average of $5400 a year. But a Treasury agent went into that plant and announced: "A man who works with his hands should not be padi as much as $5000 a year."

I have here photostatic copies of the Treasury Department notice to the Lincoln Co., marking the pay of worker after worker as "excessive."

That is the way the New Deal keeps Americans from getting ahead. That is the way it has been fighting for 12 years against the whole future of our country.

Now, when this war is over, eleven million of our best men and women will be coming home. They will be eager for jobs or an opportunity to start in business for themselves.

Suppose one of these young men wants to set up a little business. He goes to some of his friends who have saved some money and they incorporate. His wife may go with him as secretary-bookkeeper. The first thing she finds out is that she has to be an accountant, a statistician, a lawyer and a tax expert all at once.

Enigmas to the Creator

But even the experts cannot advise her how to do business under the New Deal, because they can't understand the laws themselves. I have here a dozen examples. Just listen to this little gem for section 23 (P) of the present tax law. It says that contributions to employes' pension plans "shall not be deductible under sub-section (A) but shall be deductible, if deductible under sub-section (Q), without regard to this sub-section, under this sub-section, but only to the following extent . . ." From here on it gets technical.

But uppose, in spite of everything, our veteran and his wife do succeed in building up their business and creating some jobs for other people. If they make any profit at all they must hand over to the Government $25 out of every $100 the business earns. If they are still more successful, then the Government takes $40 out of every $100; and if they are really very successful under the present tax law, the Government takes $80 out of every $100.

Of course we cheerfully pay high taxes to meet the cost of war, but the taxes we are paying today are not just for the war. They also go to pay for the waste and extravagance of the sprawling bureaucracy built up by the New Deal in these last 12 years.

Cites Wallace

Even Vice President Henry Wallace has now made a speech urging relief from "excessive taxation" and "excessive Government regulation." And who do you think came out in this morning's papers for tax relief for business. Harry Hopkins, whose slogan has been "tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect." In other words, the highest New Dealers at last admit that this Administration has created an impossible condition which urgently needs repair.

But they have had plenty of chances. They have had 12 long years of what they now admit is failure. They changed the tax law 15 times in those 12 years and only made things worse. So they ask for 16 years and promise to do better. Unfortunately, experience shows that they only talk about improving at election time and then forget all about it. That is why it's time for a change.

But this is only part of the story. Not only does the man who makes as little as $11 a week now pay an income tax, but under the New Deal, personal income taxes have been raised so that a man with a wife and one child who paid $5 when the New Deal began, now pays 76 times as much on the same income. In addition, countless hidden sales taxes have been piled onto almost everything we buy or use today. It has reached a point where every time a woman powders her nose there is a tax of 20 per centn on the powder.

Need New Point of View

One of the first jobs of your new administration which takes office next January 20 will be a revision of our tax laws. We need a whole new point of view. We need an administration which believes in full employment and in opportunity for all. We need a tax policy directed toward achieving and maintaining full employment and a rising standard of living for our people.

To that end I propose the following program, to take effect immediately after victory is won:

1. Revise the personal exemptions so that the man who makes as little as $11 a week no longer has an income tax taken out of his pay envelope.

Our objective in the peacetime years must be expansion and recovery. We cannot achieve that objective by taxes which eat into the income of those who are already below a decent American standard of living. However necessary these taxes may be in wartime, there can be no excuse for them in peace.

2. Reduce personal income tax rates. The tax law now takes at least 23 cents out of every taxable dollar after credit for dependents. That cuts the living standard of everyone who lives on a small wage. It would slow up our recovery after the war. We want to speed recovery along.

Income Tax Refrom

3. Change and lower the income tax on incorporated business companies until it no longer acts as a drag upon production and a barrier to jobs. The special wartime taxes which now rise to 95 per cent should end with the war. These taxes, of course, are almost confiscation. If continued after the war, they would encourage waste and inefficiency, discourage low cost production, and block the expansion which creates job opportunities.

4. Shorten the present endless list of excise or nuisance taxes. We should eliminate as soon as possible all excise taxes except those on alcoholic beverages, tobacco, gasoline.

5. Completely overhaul our existing, confused and complicated tax laws. We must create a basic tax law which can be expected to remain simple and generally stable. It must be one which can be adjusted from time to time by changes in rates ,without requiring a complete revision once a year or oftener.

6. Establish and proclaim a consistent, national tax policy—one directed toward achieving full employment and a rising national income—one that will assure us of a solvent nation and the ultimate reduction of our national debt.

Huge National Debt

In the years ahead we face a national debt of 300 billion dollars. We face an annual cost of Government, including adequate armed forces, far above the level of prewar years. Just to meet the interest of this debt and the cost of Government we shall need large Federal revenues. But it is stupid to suppose that we can support our Government by levying heavy taxes upon a dwindling national income.

Our first aim must be to increase our national income by putting to work all of the productive resources of our country—industry, labor and agriculture. It is far better to have a low tax rate with a ntional income of 150 billion dollars, rather than a high tax rate with a national income of 76 billion dollars as we had under the New Deal at its peacetime best. What we want is a thriving, progressive country with jobs for all. We want our tax laws to be stable and understandable, so they will no longer be a road block in the way of progress. We want them to be levied sensibly, with understanding for the human needs of our people.

That kind of tax policy we are going to have. We are going to have the kind of tax laws under which America may once more live and grow. We will have a government which wants to see every American get ahead.

Rationing Office Burglary Fails At Alexandria

Detective Lieut. Russell A. Hawes of the Alexandria Police Department reported yesterday that the War Price and Rationing Board office in Odd Fellows Hall, 218 North Columbus st., was entered between 5 p. m. Saturday and 8 a. m. Monday but no coupons or articles of value were taken.

After making a check of the office which revealed that several desks had been ransacked but the safe in which all coupons are locked had not been tampered with, Capt. James S. Douglas, jr., chief clerk of the board, reported the entry to police at 4 p. m. Monday, according to police.

Lieutenant Hawes advanced the theory that it was an attempt to steal a large number of gasoline coupons now that the Government is acting to curb the use of counterfeits.

Army Bomber Crashes in Bay With Loss of 7

Langley Field, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—A B-24 assigned to Langley Field, crashed into Chesapeake Bay five miles north of New Point Comfort this morning, Col. E. A. Lohman, commanding officer, said.

None of the crew has yet been recovered, and are all presumed to be dead. A search is still going on for the bodies.

The crew included:

The plane was on a combat training mission at the time of the crash. A board of qualified Army Air Force officers has been appointed to investigate the cause of the accident.

Leslie Hudgens, Mathews garage proprietor, said he saw a bomber dive into Chesapeake Bay this morning while he was returning from an all-night fishing trip.

Hudgens stated he notified Langley Field officials who sent two crash boats to the scene where the water was strewn with wreckage.

Hearing a roar, Hudgens said, he looked up to see the large plane in what appeared to be a power dive. When the plane reached the waters' surface, he said, it exploded.

Oil and Coal Value in War On Japan Cited

Camp Lee, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—When Germany falls, oil and coal will become increasingly precious in the war against Japan, a Nation-wide quartermaster conference of high ranking quartermaster officers of the Army, Air and service forces was told last night.

The speaker was Brig. Gen. H. L. Peckham, director of the fuels and lubricants division, office of the quartermaster general, who said that despite civilian rationing and production increases, supplies of all fuels are low.

"Conservation of fuels and lubricants has always been a wartime must and we must not cease our efforts to save every bit of fuel we can," General Peckham said.

Research Also Helps

He said that intelligent fuel selection has eliminated many shortages in local areas, and that the Army through research and analysis has been able to substitute more abundant fuels for scarcer types.

The conference, which continued today, heard officials of the storage and distribution division, office of the quartermaster general, including Brig. Gen. A. M. Owens, director; Col. W. W. Bobrink, Col. W. C. Strum, Maj. C. W. Colison, Maj. C. E. Gong, Maj. W. R. Sattler and Capt. K. L. Goldstein.

General Owens said that quartermaster depots will be confronted with many difficulties when the Axis is defeated. "It is evident that upon the defeat of Germany the supply load for Europe and North Africa will materially decrease, and that the supply load for the Pacific areas and the China-Burma-India theaters will greatly increase," he said.

He urged the supply executives present to speed up the return to civilians of any materials which may not be needed by the Army.

School Inspected

The conferees, attending what was described here as "one of the most important" conferences of the kind in this war, inspected tonight the Quartermaster School, where thousands of quartermaster officers and technicians have been trained for overseas duty. Speakers at the evening meeting included Maj. Gen. Leroy Lutes, Brig. Gen. F. A. Heilem and Maj. Gen. C. F. Robinson, all of headquarters, Army Service Forces.

Among speakers on the conference schedule tomorrow will be Dr. Douglas Freeman, editor of the Richmond News-Leader, author and historian.

Special Vote Called to Fill Harris' Seat

Richmond, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Governor Darden said today he was calling a special election November 7—the day of the general election—to fill the unexpired term of Representative Winder R. Harris, who has resigned as Congressman from the Second District.

The special election will be called the day of the general election, the Governor said, to save the expense.

Representative Harris, who was first elected to Congress in 1941, announced last April he would not be a candidate for reelection, because of a decision to accept private employment. His term ends January 3.

Parke P. Deans, chairman of the Second District Democratic committee, said that a meeting of the committee would be called within the next few days. Deans, stating he had not yet had time to confer with committee members, said he presumed that a nominee would be declared and this nominee would be State Senator Ralph H. Daughton, who was nominated for Congress in the August Democratic primary for the new term beginning in January. Daughton is opposed in the general election by Thomas L. Woodward, Republican, and W. Bruce Shaffer, jr., the independent candidate.

Span Traffic Off But Ferry Income Rises

Baltimore, Oct. 3 (AP).—Traffic over the Susquehanna River toll bridge in September decreased 3.05 per cent from September, 1943, the State Roads Commission reported today, but total transactions on the Chesapeake Bay Ferry System increased 11.48 per cent for the same period.

William A. Codd, State Roads Commission chief auditor, also reported a 6.75 per cent traffic increase on the Potomac River toll bridge for September over the same 1943 month.

There is no charge for pedestrians on the Susquehanna Bridge, nor for extra automobile passengers, such as is the case on the State-owned ferry system and the Potomac bridge.

Codd said there ware 202,510 "transactions" for the Susquehanna Bridge in September, compared with 208,876 a year ago.

Potomac bridge totals were 23,594, as compared with 22,102 in September, 1943, and the ferry totals were 92,478 as against 82,956 for September a year ago.

Statler Incident

We are not entirely clear as to what happened at the Statler Hotel on the night of Saturday, September 25, after the President had delivered his campaign speech before Mr. Daniel J. Tobin and the members of his teamsters' union. There was certainly some kind of brawl, involving, on the one hand, two naval officers and, on the other, an indeterminate number of guests at the teamsters' banquet who seem to have been aroused, whether by the presidential oratory or by some other inebriant, to an excess of partisan zeal. The hostilities appear to have been brief and not very deadly. But apparently they were noisy enough to cause the manager to telephone for the Naval Shore Patrol, which led the officers away from the scene of combat. The story of the officers, Lieut. Comdr. Suddeth and Lieut. Randolph Dickins, is that the fight began when they refused to say that they intended to vote for "the commander in chief" at the coming election. In refusing to answer such an insolent question, the officers, it seems to us, took the course that any citizen should have taken in the circumstances. If they were mauled in consequence, it was an outrage.

In normal times such an incident would scarcely be worth comment. Minor brawling is a frequent accompaniment of political campaigns as conducted in the United States. What distinguishes this particular brawl is that it occurred between civilians and officers of the United States in uniform, and that it occurred in one of the most respectable Washington hotels just after the most exalted citizen of the United States had, in his capacity as a political candidate, been delivering an argumentum ad hominem. Moreover, it occurred at a time when tempers are increasingly strained by the excitement and confusions of war and when the sense of national unity is again giving way to a renewal of group cleavage and to the conflict of group interests. One such episode may be of no particular importance. But several of them might increase to the straining point some of the serious social tensions which now exist. The Presidential candidates and their campaign leaders should realize they have a responsibility in this matter, and a responsibility which transcends their political ambitions.

No Lavish Help

Not without justice the Chinese are taking very strong objection to Premier Churchill's reference in his last speech to the "lavish American help afforded China." As a spokesman for the Chinese Military Council pointed out in Chungking the other day, American aid to China, instead of being lavish, has been "pitifully inadequate." Indeed, that spokesman insists that the total tonnage of American supplies sent to the Chinese army in eastern China from Pearl Harbor to the present "would not suffice to sustain a single British or American division in combat for one week." This may very well be true.

That does not mean, however, that the failure to send adequate aid to China was the product of an unwillingness to help China. The reason why the flow of supplies to that country has been a trickle where the situation called for a torrent was simply the sheer impossibility of sending any large volume of supplies into China. It is true, of course, as Mr. Churchill said, that the air route across the Himalayas is now carrying each month several times the freight that was carried over the Burma Road even in the best month. But that freight has been barely adequate to meet the prime needs of the Fourteenth Air Force.

Whatever the justification may have been, however, for the failure to supply China with the materiel she so desperately needs, it is evident that everything must be done that humanly can be done to increase the flow of supplies to Chiang Kai-shek's armies. During recent months they have suffered a succession of disastrous defeats which, by forcing the Fourteenth Air Force to abandon its forward bases in Southeast China, have probably prolonged the war in the Pacific by months. This is a blow to all the Allies, and if a dangerous situation is not to be allowed to become tragic, help for China must be expanded rapidly.

And that means Chiang Kai-shek's China. It is agreed by all the powers that Chiang must be supported as the pivot of postwar as well as warring China. Yet the generalissimo has reason to be discouraged not only by the lack of aid. He may feel disgruntled that General Stilwell rather than Chiang himself is the distributor of our lend-lease aid. That method doesn't help Chiang politically with the Chinese army leaders. However, it seems to be the inevitable process until a housecleaning has been accomplished in Chungking which would enlarge and liberalize the base of Chinese government.

A Job And A Half

One of these days Mr. Roosevelt, if he is still in office, will be called upon to name the civil commissioner of our zone of occupation in Germany. It will be a crucial appointment. The ban announced in respect of our Army of Occupation that they will not be permitted to fraternize with the German people will be a difficult one to maintain. It can be maintained only by having in the top places of our military government men who know how to show a commanding example of sternness.

At the top will be the military government composed, presumably, of representatives of the three major powers. But the actual administration will be managed by the respective civil commissioners, with the aid of the military acting as policemen. The task of these latter will be much more than to keep order. They must root out all the war criminals we intend to bring to justice, there must not be a vestige of Nazi or military power left, underground or overground. "Be Thorough!" will be their motto, and we need a civil commissioner who will be animated 24 hours a day with the same resolve, but who at the same time will be the symbol and the executant of justice in his dealings with the Germans.

Three names spring to mind the owners of which seem to have the qualifications requisite to this all-important post. We mention them with diffidence. Seldom have we proposed desirable candidates for vacant Government posts. But this appointment has such vast implications for our well-being that names ought to be canvassed. The names we have in mind are Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War; George S. Messersmith, Ambassador to Mexico, and Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State. All but the last named are already in administrative harness. All three have, it seems to us, a Spartan quality of mind, a toughness of fibre, an integrity united to knowledge ability, that would fit them for transfer to Germany. What the Germans need in this interim period is a man with some Junker iron in him, and these men have it.

Mr. Welles, whose absence from the Government service is a loss to the Nation, has the disciplinarian's attribute of sternness, and in mien and manner would represent authority, which is more respected in Germany than in any other country. He is a man of rich experience in the diplomatic as well as in the administrative field. As a diplomatist he has dealt with the Germans. He watched the rise of the Nazi menace and knows full well the Germans' singular ability for organizing defeat as well as war. A man with Mr. Welles' training would be able to see the traps that will be set in Germany for the unwary, and his aid to the military, accordingly, could be quite invaluable.

Topping all in Mr. Welles' qualifications is his zeal for the establishment of a new order which will insure world tranquillity. He sees the settlement of the German problem as the cornerstone of the peacemaking, and is passionately concerned that the American people shall see it in that light. His articles on the German question show a mind finely tempered to cope with the issues that will arise in the control of Germany not only in the local setting but also in the wider context of European and world stability. He is an advocate of a "hard" peace, but not of a merely vengeful or a quixotic peace. His is the wisdom which comes from attention to realities, as becomes a statesman. The country, which is hard put to it to find appropriate administrators for all the world tasks which are fast being landed on our doorsteps, can ill afford to keep him out of its service.

But Patterson, Messersmith or Welles would be "the right man in the right place at the right time," which is the President's manpower yardstick. For this reason we urge the naming of one or the other and we urge it now as a move in our psychological warfare. We cannot afford at this top level a personal or political appointment. Besides, the appointee ought to begin readying himself for his assignment.

Bulgar Puzzle

It is significant that both Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden last Friday and Secretary Hull the following Monday should have taken occasion to demand that Bulgaria withdraw her troops from Yugoslavia and Greece. Nearly a month has gone by since Bulgaria hastily sued for an armistice after the Russian declaration of war upon her. Why it has taken the European advisory commission so long to draw up the armistice terms is not clear. But there is no reason why, pending the conclusion of the armistice, Bulgaria should be permitted to maintain her troops on Allied soil. The fact that she has seen fit to do so suggests a belief at Sofia that Bulgarian claims to Greek and Yugoslav territory will have the backing of the powers.

So far as Great Britain and the United States are concerned such a belief is based on an illusion. In his latest address Prime Minister Winston Churchill referred to Bulgaria in terms of biting scorn. And there is no reason to believe that as between Greek and Yugoslav claims to the territory now occupied by Bulgar troops—where, incidentally, they disgraced themselves by their evil conduct—and the claims advanced by Bulgaria, the support of the United States will not go to the former. It may or may not be ominous that so far the demarches made by Messrs. Eden and Hull regarding the Bulgarian troops of occupation have had no parallel in any action by the Soviet Union. Does Russia plan to use Bulgaria as a bridge to advance her sphere of influence to the Aegean? It would be wrong to give a hasty answer to this question. But until Russia clarifies her stand, this question will be asked.

Arnhem's Heroes

As we come to know more about the end run at Arnhem from the first-hand reports of its survivors, our wonder grows at the qualities evocable in men by great occasions. Not even the British restraint with which the tale is told can obscure its epic proportions or its splendor. "I am afraid," said Maj. Gen. Robert Urquhart, who commanded the First Airborne Division throughout its mission, "we exceeded the limited period an airborne army can stand alone." Indeed, they did. Through imponderable and wondrous resources of spirit, they exceeded all that human flesh alone could possibly endure. And it is this, of course, that the world will note and long remember when the success or failure of the mission itself has been quite forgotten.

It is a mistake, we think, to talk of success or failure as absolutes. The First Airborne Division accomplished a good deal at Arnhem. For 10 days it contained a large body of German troops, keeping them from Nijmegen where other British forces secured a vital bridge across the Waal. The value of this achievement is incalculable. Without the crossing at Nijmegen, the attempt to outflank the Siegfried Line, now in progress, would have been seriously delayed, if not altogether arrested. And there was compensation for the loss of life at Arnhem in the saving of life at Nijmegen.

It is a fact, nevertheless, as the British have acknowledged, that the First Airborne Division failed to gain its specific objective. General Urquhart attributes this failure, if it must be so called, to three factors—heavy antiaircraft fire, bad weather and the fact that the Germans were "a damned sight stronger than we anticipated." All three of these factors were beyond the control of the strategists who planned the Arnhem operation, although they should have been, and undoubtedly were, foreseen as contingencies. It must have been known, at least, that the Germans would defend the upper reaches of the Rhine as stoutly as possible. The crucial importance of the area made this certain. But it was precisely the crucial importance of the area which impelled the Allied command to take tremendous risks. The stake was worth the gamble. And it is this consideration, rather than any assessment of success or failure from the vantage point of hindsight, which must determine the validity of the undertaking.

The toughest obstacle at Arnhem appears to have been the weather. And here was a contingency which could not have been foretold. The weather was unreasonably and unconscionably bad. Because of it, the second flight of the British force could not get down on schedule. And in the meantime, the men of the first flight, hopelessly outnumbered, lost their hold upon the bridge. Then, pressed back against the north bank of the river, the division was subjected to murderous heavy mortar and artillery fire—and to the terrible punishment of flame throwers against which it had no adequate defense.

It is notable that even the enemy recognized the heroic quality of these men—who included Poles as well as British—at Arnhem and in some measure were ennobled by it. "The Huns," said General Urquhart, "allowed our jeeps to run back and forth to a well which was in their hands, to get water for the wounded." Can we be so lacking in a sense of proportion that the incident doesn't remind us of the dying Sir Philip Sidney who, on this same battlefield nearly four centuries ago, gave his cup of cold water to a wounded soldier? Perhaps this is the final validation of the valor at Arnhem—that it evoked, and will evoke, in men everywhere a fresh and exalting sense of human grandeur.

WIND IN THE WHEATFIELD

Winds stir the rippling wheat; the far clouds whisper
Of gathering storm; the flying, knife-swift shadows,
Scythes from heaven, scatter storm and brightness
From the invisible fountains over the threshing meadows.

Substance from shadow dissolved—absolved, resolving
Sun out of storm again, the wheat rises tall with power,
Unbent by the rain's flails, the gold kernel growing,
Storing up strength for the high Olympian hour.

Bread for the hungry, hope for the meager-hearted,
Here in these stalks, a-dazzle in sun, in this still
Miraculous peace after storm; the gold sheaves clustered
In multiple wonder high on the sun-bright hill.

Golden the increase, golden the tall sheaves, rising:
Whose footsteps, light as blown air, go moving by?
Is it Demeter, mother of earth, blessing the hidden harvests
Of storm-bright earth and sky?

Women's Jobs

By Malvina Lindsay

Married Workers

WE MAY EXPECT to be hearing soon another national debate on "Should Married Women Work?"

It probably will be less heated than the one of the depression 30's when the populace was scrambling for jobs, or of the revolutionary 20's when the career-wife aroused a hubbub of controversy. During these war years Americans have grown accustomed to former "home women" in slacks or overalls running the machines of industry. Even before the war, the two-job woman was generally accepted in office and shop.

Nevertheless, the woman worker's status is going to be questioned again—and if severe unemployment occurs, it will be gravely questioned. Already congressional orators are arising to pay gallant tribute to the way in which women have heroically left their firesides for factory and ship yard—and to suggest that they should soon be getting back home, at least in time that they won't have to be included in post-war unemployment benefits.

In the Buffalo area, where the Department of Labor has been making a study based on manufacturers' postwar plans, many women have been leaving war industries, partly as a result, it is believed, of clergymen's sermons urging such action.

Postwar employment planners would find it much easier to go on with their blueprints if they knew just what the 6,500,000 women who have entered industry since the war began—more than half of them coming directly from their homes—were going to do when peace comes. Few of the planners expect the future employment problem to be simplified by any general retreat of women to the home. Generally speaking, they see not more than 3 million of the 18 million women now on payrolls withdrawing voluntarily.

Marriage Popular

A recent study by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor on "Changes in Women's Employment During the War," indicates that increasing employment of married women may be expected in the future.

The percentage of married women in the population has greatly increased since 1940, while the percentage of single women has declined. Also, asserts the report, "most working women, whatever their marital status or age, must support themselves, and in many cases others as well." It further makes the point that the time has passed when a woman can automatically leave her job when she marries. Now frequently she cannot marry unless she continues working and using her earnings to help establish her new home.

Another development in American life, that of an increasing proportion of older persons, will tend to keep married women in the labor market. Many young women must continue to work after marriage to help in the support of elderly family members.

After this war, a large number of women whose husbands were incapacitated in service will have to stay on in their jobs. Also, it is expected that many will try to hold on until their returning husbands can find work and get established. Other women who have known for the first time in their lives the experience of having and handling money of their own will be reluctant to give up their economic independence.

Tired of It All

On the other hand, a great many will be near the breaking point from trying to carry on two jobs, and will, if the way is opened, gladly go home. Many others will be eager to get back to their domestic pursuits, especially the care of their children.

Since the war began, two million women workers have left their jobs, the Women's Bureau reports. Of these, 90 per cent went to "home housework." Of those who left industry, 62 per cent were married with "husbands present."

No matter how much discussion develops as to what all working women with "husbands present" should do, the problem will work itself out largely as economic and social forces direct. No such Fascist measure as a wholesale forced return of women to the home will take place in this country.

Undoubtedly many women workers will be displaced by war plants closing. A part of these will go home. Others will shift to lighter industries. Many will find opportunities in the traditional feminine fields, as food, clothing, health and social welfare. All of these fields will expand greatly after peace comes.

The married woman worker will find her future depending largely on the general state of the Nation and the world. If an economy can be developed, in which there are jobs for all, she will find her lot easier. Yet if she should be under fire for awhile, she can comfort herself that she has a social evolution on her side. When the Women's Bureau report calls, "the early idea that society has the right to regulate the lives of women in personal matters more than it does the lives of men" is on the way out. The time is nearing when a woman's married or unmarried state will be as much of a personal and private matter as is a man's.

Controlling Germany

By Sumner Welles

Disciplines To Be Imposed

THE ANNOUNCEMENT that General Marshall has instructed our armed forces that from the day they enter Germany they will be surrounded by enemies on all sides and that, therefore, all fraternization with the German population is rigidly prohibited has come as welcome news.

The publication of photographs showing our men being effusively entertained by German inhabitants of the invaded zones of Germany did not sit well with public opinion here.

Except for a few soft-headed members of the British House of Lords, the scenes must have seemed fantastic to our European Allies. They have suffered the tragedies and horror for which these same Germans must share the responsibility.

The Germans are adepts at propaganda of this seemingly innocent kind. We have only to remember their success during the months immediately after the first World War in currying favor with the American troops occupying the Rhineland. They not only succeeded in greatly increasing ill-feeling between the Americans and the French and British forces who were sharing in the task of occupation. They were also able to persuade many of our officers and men that the German people were the innocent victims of unjust and repressive measures imposed upon them by their cruel French and British taskmasters.

Under present conditions, when the European campaign is approaching its final climax, any form of fraternization would be filled with military danger. But from the longer viewpoint the issue involves aspects of basic policy which are highly important.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD that as soon as the German armies have surrendered, the eastern part of Germany will be occupied by Soviet forces; the western part by British, and the southern part by American forces, and that coordination of policy in the respective zones will be undertaken by an over-all commission composed of representatives of the three powers.

This occupation of German territory will be only the first phase of an extended control to be exercised by the United Nations over the German people. During this first period must be undertaken the most severe measures which the Allied powers will be compelled to carry out. These will include the capture and trial of the war criminals; the disarmament of the German nation; the obliteration of the German war machine and of its human tools, and the consolidation of whatever permanent policy of control over Germany the United Nations may fix.

During this period the German people will be surreptitiously encouraged by their underground leaders to make every effort, as they did after the last war, to arouse the sympathy of the occupying forces and, in particular, to play off one of the victorious allies against the others, as they also did so successfully after the last war. The orders issued from the War Department in Washington should lessen this very real danger.

It becomes clear from recent reports that the three major powers have not yet reached any final agreement upon the nature of the controls which must be exercised over Germany in the postwar years.

The smaller powers, and in particular Germany's neighbors, have not as yet been afforded any official opportunity of expressing their wishes or of offering their suggestions as to the policy to be adopted. Here again is a salient instance of the time which could have been saved and of the possible dilemmas which could have been avoided had an executive council of the United Nations been functioning during these past months.

I HAVE OFTEN urged the need for decentralization of the future Germany as the basis of any control policy which the Allied nations might adopt. Decentralization, apart from the cession to Poland of East Prussia and its attendant transfer of populations, would imply the continued division of Germany into the three zones which will be established by the military occupation for an indefinite time. It would mean subsequent autonomy for the historically separate and independent German states. It would mean that the ability of the German general staff once again to use the unification of the German people for its own ends would be greatly impaired. It would mean that the capacity of the German industrialists to use giant cartels as a means of furthering German political and military domination would be ended.

German decentralization is, of course, by no means the sole answer to the question of how the future resurgence of German militarism can be prevented. Permanent disarmament, the elimination of German aviation, supervision over customs houses and either the abolition of Germany's heavy-goods industries or their control by international agencies are just as essential. But I believe all other such objectives can be more readily achieved if political and economic decentralization is made the foundation of policy.

In the exceptionally valuable study entitled "Economic Control of Germany," by President Moulton of the Brookings Institution, and the distinguished French scientist, Louis Marlio, it is said that if close economic relations between the parts of a divided Germany are permitted the division of Germany would be impotent as a method of controlling armament production, and that if a free exchange of commodities is not allowed the effect would be disastrous not only upon the economic life of Germany but also upon the future economic life of the rest of Europe.

Both of these statements are, in my judgment, indisputable. There is, however, no reason, as the Brookings Institution study apparently maintains, why a choice has to be made between the adoption of one or the other of the alternatives discussed, namely, international control of German industry or decentralization. The desirable objective would, rather, be the adoption of both alternatives.

THERE IS NOTHING in such a policy which would militate against the ultimate enjoyment by every German national of economic security. A radical adjustment of Germany's national economy would necessarily be required. But the German people's oft demonstrated efficiency in industrial and agricultural production will rapidly bring about the adaptations necessary.

The stability of the future Europe demands that the individual German be offered the chance to achieve economic security. But the German people cannot again be safely treated as equal members of the family of nations until they have proved through the years which lie ahead that their national regeneration has taken place. This they must comprehend. They must be forced to realize that the disciplines to be imposed upon them will offer no opportunity for propaganda designed to capture the sympathy of sentimentalists or to create disunity among the United Nations.

The most effective way through which the German people can be taught these facts would be the knowledge that the victorious nations had unanimously agreed upon a postwar policy toward Germany which contains these essential features and which will thus spell safety for the rest of the world.

Morgenthau Plan

A dispatch announces this morning that the President "had ordered the speeding up of studies on how to control Germany's 'power and capacity to make war in the future'" . . . It is significant to note that the President is opposed to the Morgenthau Plan—proposing "the conversion of Germany to a predominantly agricultural economy as a means of preventing it from menacing European peace." This simply means that we are going to be good to Germany, by allowing her to resume her industrial status, as of yore, but under so-called rigid control so "as to prevent its perversion of war-making."

Gentlemen and Optimists! None is so blind as he who would not see! There is a German proverb which tells us that "Opportunity makes the thief." Should the Allied nations, who are held responsible for the lives of the entire world, allow Germany to be other than an agricultural center, we will, in the light of past experience, simply be extending to her a most cordial invitation to come back at us in a more barbaric, a more ruthless manner than known heretofore.

We all hope and pray that our leaders will have the wisdom and foresight so essential in these critical times. That they don't simply hand over the lives and well-being of this and future generations to these bestial Germans who just happen to resemble a human being—and nothing more.

You can't trust a snake! Have we not seen enough? Haven't we endured sufficiently to learn our lesson? What more do we need?

J. L. HUDSON

Morgenthau Plan

The Morgenthau Plan to convert Germany into an agricultural nation has been taking a beating from all sides. I agree with its critics that it should not have been published at this time. The German people do not deserve the unique privilege of viewing their destiny ahead of schedule.

The plan, in itself too severe, points the way to the necessary firm treatment of a vanquished enemy. The "ring" has had it run and now the Germans must pay for the use of the theater. This payment cannot be in money alone; it need not be in blood. But it must be payment in full.

A plan, not quite so thoroughgoing as the Morgenthau Plan, entailing the allocation of the fruits of German industry for a period of years among those peoples hardest hit by previous yields, might prove a very desirable solution to the twofold problem of rebuilding Europe and punishing the aggressor.

Sen. Ball's Stand

By Mark Sullivan

National Unity

LAST WEEK REPUBLICAN Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota announced that he would not campaign for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey "at this time" because he does not yet feel that Mr. Dewey is as strongly in favor of a strong international organization to prevent future wars as Senator Ball wishes he would be. It should be added that Senator Ball, by his utterances, actions and associations, is thought of as being zealous for a particular type of strong organization.

Senator Ball's action has disturbing implications. For there now exists in America one of the most remarkable conditions ever seen in any political campaign in this or any other country. It is an agreement by the two parties not to introduce into the presidential campaign the issue of an international organization for preventing war. The agreement has been made formal by an extraordinary exchange of letters between the Republican presidential candidate and the Democratic Secretary of State. So remarkable an incident justifies a phrase applied to it, "political miracle."

SENATOR BALL'S statement tends to endanger this agreement, for it invites reply, counter-reply, and ultimately a free-for-all. Such a political melee would not be on the basic question whether there shall be an international organization, for on that there is practically universal agreement. The melee would be on details. But the ultimate effect of emotions aroused would be a detriment to the prospect of any organization at all.

Senator Ball's action runs counter to another important condition—the rule that there should be national unity behind the Government in the Government's relations with foreign nations. At this moment negotiations are under way between our Government and those of Britain and Russia, looking to an international peace organization. The negotiations are just now in the delicate stage which lies between informal discussion and formal steps. It is understood that there are differences of point of view between our Government and the others, especially Russia—it would be remarkable if there were not.

In the point of view Secretary Hull takes, he is able to speak firmly for his country. He is able to do this just because of the political truce that exists, and because of the patience on his part which was largely responsible for bringing the truce about. Mr. Hull derives his strength from a determination he has held ever since the notion of an international organization arose. Always he has held that the form of organization ultimately to be arrived at must be one which shall have the overwhelming assent of the American people. In his view such assent by the people and only such assent would in turn assure assent by that two-thirds of the Senate which is necessary to ratify the organization. This end Mr. Hull has further assured by keeping in touch, step by step, with both Republican and Democratic Senate leaders.

IN HIS PRESENT negotiations with Britain and Russia, Mr. Hull has a tentative blank check. It is a perfectly prudent blank check, for the primary reason that Mr. Hull is not a man who would make unreasonable use of a blank authorization. It is safe for the further reason that the authorization does not become binding until after complete public debate and understanding of the nature of the proposed commitment, and until after action upon it by the Senate.

Specifically, the present stage of progress toward an international organization is this: Informal discussions by subordinates of the three governments have just been completed. Reports of the discussions have been made to the respective governments. Shortly, statements of what the discussions agreed upon will be made public. This will lead to the first stage of popular discussion. Later there will be a meeting of the heads of the three governments. These will arrive at a concrete proposal. The proposal will, of course, not be effective until passed upon by the three governments. This final stage, involving debate in the Senate, will provide abundant opportunity for popular discussion to say whether the proposed form of organization is the one which America wants, or whether there is to be still further negotiation.

Mr. Ickes' Letter

I am casting my vote for the first time this November, and I am definitely voting Republican. After reading Harold Ickes' childishly written letter to Mr. Dewey, I am firmly convinced this country needs to include real, dignified statesmen in its Cabinet in the days to come.

YOUNG VOTER.

Silver Spring, Md., Sept. 28.

Mr. Ickes required 700 words to say what Dewey said in seven, and I quote, "Indeed he is indispensable to Harold Ickes."

Dumbarton Oaks

By Ernest Lindley

Point Of Disagreement

ONE OF THE POINTS on which the Big Three of the first Dumbarton Oaks Conference disagreed was understood to be whether a great power, sitting as a permanent member of the proposed world council, should have the right to vote on the action to be taken in a dispute to which it was a direct party. "Dispute" in this case means a charge of aggression or threat of aggression.

LINDLEY

The United States and Great Britain are understood to insist that in such case the great power involved should not vote. Russia is understood to insist that it should. China is understood to support the view of the United States and Britain. Dr. Wellington Koo so indicated in his formal address at the opening of the second Dumbarton Oaks Conference.

Since the long debate on this point in the first conference was held in secret and the participants have not talked freely outside the conference rooms, we do not have the benefit of all the arguments pro and con. But to some bystanders the difference seemed to be one of manners and appearance rather than of substance.

THERE WAS NO disagreement among the United States, Britain, and Russia on the general rule that action by the proposed world council should require not only a majority vote of all its members but the unanimous vote of the great powers sitting as permanent members. The difference, apparently, was only over the voting right of a great power if it was charged with aggression or the threat of aggression or if it brought such charges against another nation.

If the great power brought the charges against a smaller nation, not a permanent member of the council enjoying an absolute veto, no action would be taken without the affirmative votes of all of the other great powers sitting as permanent members plus the votes of enough smaller nations sitting as rotating members to make a majority of the council. Whether the great power bringing the charge voted would seem to be unimportant. If the other great powers were agreed, enough of the smaller nations certainly would join with them to make a majority of the council.

If the great nation itself was charged with aggression, what difference would it make whether it voted or not? The other nations on the council would hardly vote to take any serious action unless they were prepared to fight a great war. What difference would it make whether the dissent of the great power charged with aggression or the threat of it was registered by a negative vote on the council?

A majority of the council, including all of the other great powers, might recommend that the charge or dispute be submitted to arbitration or the world court. Some such step might be taken without resort to the sanctions which in such a case would almost certainly mean a big war. But the great power directly involved in the charge could ignore the recommendation.

The international lawyers and diplomats sitting at Dumbarton Oaks could illustrate more precisely and profusely the situations which might theoretically arise in the proposed world council if one of the great powers were charged with aggression. But why waste time in these speculations?

By agreement among the major powers, quotas of armed forces could be made available to the world organization for specific limited purposes such as the enforcement of the peace terms imposed on Germany or on Japan or to suppress aggression by one small nation against another. But there does not seem to be any practicable way of endowing it with the power necessary to restrain or punish, let us say, the United States or the Soviet Union. None of the great powers will be adjudged giulty of aggression unless the other great powers are prepared to wage war against it. Short of that, a great power can be curbed only by its own self-restraint.

IT MAY SEEM well-mannered for a great power to promise to refrain from voting when it is accused of aggression. As a polite concession to the small nations, which can be coerced without a great war, such a promise may be desirable.

But to some politicians and observers in Washington the Russian viewoint seems both more realistic and more likely to commend itself to Congress. They argue that the Senate would not ratify any understanding which would enable the Executive, through his representative on the world council, to cast a vote which might embroil the United States in a war with another great power. Likewise, they argue, the Senate might well balk at any agreement which, even theoretically, would deprive the United States of its veto power as a permanent member. The most that the Senate is likely to agree to, they believe, is that the Executive shalll have the power, without further reference to Congress, to make limited forces available to the world council. On the other hand, a vote to take action against another great power would signify readiness to mobilize for a full-fledged war and to fight it. It would mean the end of the effort to preserve peace through a world organization.

According to this view, it is idle and dangerous to pretend that in the visible future the proposed world council could, or would, attempt to corce one of its own major members.

The Gallup Poll

Estimated 39,500,000 Votes In November Is 16-Year Low

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 3.—Evidence available at this stage of the political campaign points to a likely turnout of 39,500,000 civilian voters in the presidential election, not including ballots from the armed forces.

This represents a sharp drop from the 1940 election, when nearly 50 million people went to the polls.

The comparatively low anticipated turnout in November is a factor which many Democrats will look upon with dismay. A light turnout generally helps the Republicans and hurts the Democrats, because it usually means fewer workers and low-income voters going to the polls. Analysis of the 1942 elections shows that a substantial part of the gain in seats made by the Republicans in the House of Representatives was owing to the light turnout.

Seek Bigger Turnout

Hence it is easy to see why the Democrats, faced with the possibility of a low turnout this year, are redoubling their efforts to get out the vote.

In arriving at the present estimate for turnout several things were taken into account, principally the Philadelphia voting registration which closed September 18, the turnout in the recent State and local elections in Maine, and the degree of voting in primaries that have been held throughout the country. All these things taken together would indicate that 39,500,000 is a reasonably accurate estimate at this stage in the campaign. The Institute will make new estimates as further data become available from registrations and from surveys indicating degree of interest in the presidential campaign.

Phenomenally Low

A civilian turnout of 39,500,000 would be phenomenally low for a presidential year in terms of the total number of potential voters. According to a recent report by the Bureau of the Census, there were 88,600,000 "potential voters"—men and women 21 years old or over—as of January 1, 1944. This includes all men over 21 in the armed forces.

The Census Bureau estimated that if voting this year were in the same ratio as the 1940 presidential election, the total turnout in November would be 55,300,000 with the servicemen included. This ratio would mean 50,300,000 with the servicemen excluded.

One has only to compare this latter figure of 50,300,000 potential civilian votes at the 1940 ratio, with the 39,500,000 actually anticipated, to see the decline in turnout which the political parties face today.

Lightest Since 1928

The following table shows how the estimated 39,500,000 turnout compares with the vote cast in other recent presidential elections. It would be the lightest vote for President since 1928.

1928	36,800,000
1932	39,800,000
1936	45,600,000
1940	49,800,000
1944 (est.)	39,500,000*

*Civilians only.

The size of the servicemen's vote can only be a matter of speculation at this time. Later evidence, chiefly the number of requests from the armed forces for ballots, should shed further light on the situation.

Frederick Water Shortage Still Acute

Frederick, Md., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Recent rains have failed to help the water situation as far as Frederick City is concerned, Frank Wedd, caretaker at the municipal dam at Fishing Creek, said today that the water level is 12 feet below top of the retaining wall and is still dropping several inches each day.

Mayor Huge V. Gittinger indicated that more stringent restrictions on use of water may be invoked if the situation fails to improve within the near future.

Hubbard Indicted In Street Slaying

Denton, Md., Oct. 3 (AP).—The Caroline County grand jury indicted a Negro for murder today in the gun slaying of a white man on the main street of Preston, Md., last September 21.

No date was set for the trial of Howard Hubbard, sr., held in Baltimore for safekeeping after a group of armed men made an unsuccessful attempt to find him in the Caroline County jail.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Chicago's Political Machine

Chicago—IF THE DEMOCRATS carry any of the States in the Corn-Hog Belt, it will be due almost entirely to Roosevelt's personal prestige and to the force of the argument that the Commander in Chief must be kept on to finish the war. In other words, the President will win in spite of his party and his friends.

CHILDS

On that at least, experts, and even politicians when they talk candidly, agree. In the Middle West, whatever organization the Democratic Party may have developed, thanks to the rise of the New Deal, has largely withered away.

That is not true, of course, in Chicago. But even here in the domain of Mayor Kelly, the Democratic machine isn't what it used to be—not by a long way.

One important element is missing, and that is gray little Pat Nash, who used to do all the spade work quietly, out of sight. Ed Kelly was his partner, his front man, and a handsome, imposing one.

Nash died a year ago, and they say that in the wards back of the tracks you can hear the boys muttering their dissatisfaction with the way things are going—or, rather, not going. Some of Nash's old friends were ignored or passed over by Kelly, and that has not made for good feeling.

THE MAYOR is plagued by all the diseases that success and long tenure in office are heir to. A tempest is raging around his head now over an order of the school board forbidding children to transfer from one school to another. Beneath the surface, that is linked to racial tensions which exist here, and Kelly can make a good argument that the school board had no other choice.

Nevertheless, the blame from worried and irate parents falls on him. Kelly scoffs at the idea that this could cost a single Roosevelt vote. Yet it's precisely the kind of issue that touches the average citizen, who is likely to punish the head of the ticket, indiscriminately, for something that hasn't the remotest connection with national policy.

What it comes down to is whether Kelly can deliver a sufficiently large vote in Chicago to offset the Republican tidal wave expected from down-State. The Republican organization down-State is said to be doing a house-to-house job of registration. With control of the entire State administration, they have patronage and money, in marked contrast to the Democrats, who haven't any organization left to speak of.

The Republicans do have one handicap, and that is their candidate for the United States Senate, Richard J. Lyons. From all reports, Lyons is completely dominated by the Chicago Tribune, and the feeling is that Colonel McCormick should be able to get along with the one Senator he already has, the Hon. C. Wayland "Curly" Brooks.

Lyons is seeking to oust the Democratic incumbent, Senator Scott W. Lucas, who comes from down-State, where he has considerable popularity. Several down-State Republican papers have come out for him. It is said that Lucas might be returned to Washington even if the President failed to carry Illinois.

ROOSEVELT'S MAJORITY in this State last time was approximately 100,000 votes, which compared with his 1936 majority of 750,000. To offset the wave of rampant Republicanism from down-State—aroused as never before, it is reported, by the Hillman-Communist bogey — Kelly would have to produce a Roosevelt majority of at least 300,000 in the city.

Jeering at the skeptics, he says he'll do it easily. In fact, he radiates an optimism which he shows every sign of feeling. This year's, he says, will be bigger than '40. It will be another Roosevelt landslide.

But Kelly today is rich and respectable. Whether the sweaty spadework will get done down in the wards is the question. If it isn't, then Illinois will go Republican with its neighboring States.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

HIGH-UP REPUBLICANS aren't saying anything about it, but they are sore as blazes at one of the stanchest party members, Albert Lasker, for deserting to Roosevelt.

Lasker, former head of one of the top advertising firms in the United States, was one of the managers of Warren Harding's campaign in 1920 and, as a reward, was made chairman of the Shipping Board. He has been one of the inside advisers in the Republican Party councils almost ever since, and three times voted against Roosevelt. This time, however, he says he will vote for Roosevelt.

Alice Roosevelt Longworth, one of his old friends in the Harding Administration, has argued with him. So has Mrs. Ogden Reid, vice president of the Republican New York Herald Tribune. They have called him a "traitor" and all sort of things. But Lasker has stood pat.

He says there are a lot of things that smell bad about the Roosevelt Administration, and sometimes he has to hold his nose.

"In fact," says Lasker, "it's a choice between holding your nose with Roosevelt, or closing your eyes to Dewey. But," he concludes, "I've never walked over a cliff holding my nose."

Japs Move to China

IT IS no longer a military secret that the war in the Central Pacific is five to six months ahead of schedule. Guam and Saipan were not supposed to have been taken until sometime next year. Also the bombing of the Philippines is several months ahead of the time table.

However, along with this good news are some distressing facts about China, which nobody wants to shout about.

One is that the Japs are transporting more and more machinery to China and digging in there for a long war. Apparently they figure that the Japanese homeland is in for steady bombing and eventual occupation, so they are transferring things to the mainland of China.

China, they know better than almost anyone else, is a quagmire when any outside country tries to invade it, so it might take years for the British, American and Russian armies to root the Japs out, provided they themselves can get sufficiently entrenched.

Another discouraging factor is that we have engaged only a small part of the Jap army in the South Pacific, leaving untouched vast reserves which the Japs have been keeping at home and in China.

Finally, Chiang Kai-shek's prestige is increasingly on the wane inside China. He has been the chief exponent of cooperation with the USA, but recently his anti-US war lords have been getting the upper hand. We have to face the fact that some of them would even prefer to work with the Japs than have their territory fought over by Allied armies. It doesn't make a happy picture.

Note—On the other hand, the Jap fleet has taken so many reverses that they scarcely dare return home.

Yankee Ingenuity

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL paid sincere tribute in Parliament to the terrific job of the U. S. Army in landing more than a million men since D-Day and moving hundreds of millions of tons of guns, food, munitions up from the beaches into the front. However, the real inside story of this supply miracle has not yet been told.

The ingenuity of U. S. supply officers in contriving temporary docks staggers civilian imagination.

One way of landing supplies was to drive fully loaded ships right onto the beaches and deliberately turn them over on their sides, with the sterns extending into the water.

After these ships were run aground, GI's built platforms on their sides, making simulated temporary piers. Other ships then docked alongside them.

Another impressive device still being used by supply troops are hundreds of hastily constructed railroad barges strung end to end from the beaches out to sea, where they are anchored, making a floating pier.

NOTE—Within two weeks after the Allies captured Cherbourg, that great French port was handling a greater amount of supplies than it did in prewar times.

Capital Chaff

THE PHILADELPHIA DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION of 1936 is remembered by some not merely because it renominated Franklin Roosevelt for a second term, but because a Negro preacher, for the first time in Democratic annals, delivered a convention convocation. While he was praying, Senator Cotton Ed Smith of South Carolina, disgustedly stomped out. . . . That Negro preacher, the Rev. Marshall Shepard of Philadelphia, has now been made recorder of deeds in the District of Columbia, despite strong Deep South and Republican opposition.

Flouting Cotton Ed Smith, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia sent his vote from a sick bed to break the committee tie and help confirm Rev. Shepard . . .

During one vitriolic Senate debate recently, Senator Bennett Clark, Missouri Democrat, stung by constant questions from New Hampshire's Republican Styles Bridges, stormed: "My answer to that, as to any question asked by the Senator from New Hampshire, is no." . . . Rowing with able John McCormack on the House floor, Minnesota's bumptious Representative Harold Knutson recently said: "The gent—I beg your pardon—the distinguished majority leader."

Air Force Films

BUSIEST STUDIO in Hollywood today is the First Motion Picture Unit, Army Air Forces.

Among other things, it is producing films teaching airmen how to fend for themselves when they bail out or are forced down in rough country. Crews from the Air Forces studio are even sent to the Panama jungles to prepare film material showing airmen how to deal with snakes, jungle swamps, jungle food possibilities, poison plants and first aid.

For a long time this has been taught airmen in classrooms and in the field. However, the Army has discovered that this past training is useless if a soldier becomes panicky while landing. Seeing the situation on the screen, therefore, helps him if he is forced down on the water, in the desert or jungle, for the visual impression is stronger than the memory of lectures.

Another important film subject is first aid for members of bombing crews while they are in the air. Finally, the Air Forces studio is turning out rehabilitation films showing airmen who have lost a limb how they may return to civilian life. Army medicos hope these films may dispel the feeling of uselessness on the part of permanently disabled airmen.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

President to Defend Size of Government

COMING EVENTS: The President will defend the size and activities of our wartime Government. He's gathering material for it, presumably, for a forthcoming political speech . . . BUDGET BUREAU: This agency has high hopes of making recommendations to the President before election which will result in the elimination of several thousand employes and the reorganization of several wartime functions . . . WAR PRODUCTION BOARD has been ordered to cut its staff by 1300 by November 30. Tentative plans call for the dropping of 800 people here and another 500 in the field. Meantime, WPB has frozen its personnel—except those who want to leave—for a two-week period to give the personnel office time to make up a reduction in force list . . . The CIO will allow the United Federal Workers to elect its own officers at the New York convention this month. Previously, the union officers have been appointed by the CIO president. Eleanor Nelson and Arthur Stein both will run for the offices they now hold.

KLUTTZ

TOURING: As every sightseer knows, Maury Maverick forced Sunday openings and tours of the Capitol building. The response has been tremendous. The Sunday tours are now called "Mavericks" by the guides. Anyway, Maury took off for London the other day, much to the surprise of a lot of people, apparently to see how the British were handling small business. One astonished person called Jonathan Daniels, administrative assistant to the President, to ask what Maverick was going to do in London . . . "I don't know," answered Daniels, "maybe he's going to arrange free tours through Westminster."

The chief of the Surplus War Aircraft Division in the Defense Plants Corp. bears a famous name—James A. Garfield—and he comes from a distinguished family. He was named for his grandfather, ex-President of the United States, and his father, James R. Garfield, was Secretary of the Interior under President Theodore Roosevelt. Garfield is an unassuming and hard-working Federal official and many of his colleagues are unaware of his famous family. He joined the Government service in April, 1942, and worked in the legal office of U. S. Commercial until it was transferred to Foreign Economic Administration. Early this year he transferred back to Reconstruction Finance Corp. and he's now engaged in the disposal of surplus property.

It looks like Ruth Welty started something when she organized the "Matriots" to run men out of the Federal service. Since the story first appeared in this column, sympathizers have been calling in for more information—where they can get application cards, and the like. The response has convinced me that the girls go along with the idea that they can work as well, if not better, than men, but most of them disagree violently with Miss Welty's technique—such as snooping, tying up the Government's operations in red tape, and anything to discourage men so they'll "get out with relief." The girls say they can earn the job on merit if they're given the chance.

Many girls foresee the end of the war when they expect to see a recurrence of the age-old fight to drive women out of offices back into the kitchens. History shows that women make the longest steps forward in Government during wartime and they are pushed out of their jobs when peace comes. With this in mind, the girls would join the "Matriots," or any other organization, if it would fight to preserve their wartime gains.

"I'm for organizing," said one girl. "If we don't, we'll be looking for jobs in a couple of years."

Another girl said Miss Welty "was 25 years ahead of the times," and she pointed to the fact that there are more women in Government today than there were total Federal employes four years ago. She believes the trend will continue. Others denounced Miss Welty, a Civil Service Commission employe, as an "excessive feminist." And I must admit that I took like a gentleman a couple of bawlings out from the ladies for my story on the "Matriots."

Unofficially, the Civil Service Commission has been a little embarrassed by Miss Welty's program. But officially, it is ignoring the whole thing, although C. C. Hathaway, director of information, suggested to Miss Welty it would be best not to hold a press conference on Government property and on Government time. However, she hasn't been gagged by the commission. After all, the commission is supposed to give the best-qualified person the job, regardless of sex. And for the acting chief of a division to advocate that women get all the jobs and men be kicked in the pants isn't exactly what you'd call carrying out the spirit of the merit system. Miss Welty has a splendid record in Government and she's a career employe. In 1930, one of her plays was produced on Broadway and she has written a full-length book on her favorite subject—women.

Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

BUSINESS IS FOR Roosevelt BECAUSE Roosevelt ASSURES PROSPERITY!

A SMALL but extremely powerful minority of business men in this country has, for reasons of its own, been trying for twelve years, to convince you that business generally is hostile to Franklin D. Roosevelt, his policies and programs.

This is not so.

It never has been so. And it is high time that business men got together to tell the American public that they believe in the President and they staunchly support his candidacy for re-election.

We endorse Roosevelt simply because we have become convinced that his Administration has brought profound and lasting benefits to business and to the economic life of the nation—and we want these benefits to continue.

If you believe with us that:

1. President Roosevelt provides the best assurance for the continuation of the free enterprise system . . .

2. President Roosevelt has sponsored and fought for an expanding economy . . .

3. President Roosevelt has the experience needed by our Chief Executive for the establishment of national and world security . . .

then, we invite you to take your place beside us. Ours is an independent, non-profit, national organization of business men and women. We have associated together in this critical time to explain to the American public, via press, radio and educational literature, that Business is for Roosevelt because Roosevelt assures prosperity.

We need support. That means we need money. There is not much time left. Decide now to help us. Fill out the coupon and mail it—with a check for all you possibly can up to the legal limit of $5000.*

Do it now . . . !

Lower Fare Approved On Inter-Silver Spring Buses

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday received permission from the Maryland Public Service Commission to change the fares on route Z-8 on the Silver Spring community bus line in providing an overlap of Zone 2 on Zone 1.

Beginning Friday passengers on buses goin gto Sligo ave. and Schrider st., end of the first zone will no longer have to pay an extra nickel for the second zone at Piney Branch rd. and Dale dr.

Because of requests from parents of many children who lived in the second zone, CTC asked the PSC of Maryland for the change, according to E. C. Gittings, assistant to the president of CTC. Many children wanting to save the extra fare go on and off the buses between the zone limits and walked 2100 feet to the Silver Spring Elementary School on Silver Spring ave.

Pointing out that few adults use the buses during the day, Gittings said the hange in the tariff was made to acommodate the children, who live in zone 2.

Due to the resignation of John H. Oldfield, Bethesda, as emergency policeman, Richard H. Sedgwick, 905 Thayer ave., Silver Spring, was appointed in his place at a salary of $175 a month.

Postwar economic problems.
There won't be very many problems, certainly. If the country entrusts itself to us. With our enterprise, knowledge, vision, and—

Engineers Donate $536 to Phone Fund

Four young women employed by the Office of the Chief of Engineers, War Department, walked into The Washington Post yesterday lugging a large box crammed with small change and bills. The total was $536, collected in their office for the First Call Home Fund sponsored by The Post.

The money from the Office of the Chief of Engineers was delivered by Miss Marguerite Walker, engineering and development division; Miss Charlotte Remer, supply division, and Miss Jane Cook and Tillye Ehrlich, employe relations section.

"Some o fthe workers in our office had wanted to contribute but did not have a whole dollar to spare at this time," explained Miss Cook. "Our collection gave those people the opportunity to give any amount they could. We received donations from a few pennies to $20 bills."

"Not a Sacrifice, a Privilege"

Employes o fthe International Branch of Field Service, Stock Control Division, Army Ordnance, sent in their office collection of $21 and the letter of appeal distributed to the workers in raising that amount.

"Our freedom and security has been preserved by the willingness of our soldiers and sailors to make the supreme sacrifice," the letter stated. "Your contribution to this fund cannot be termed a donation in the usual sense of the word, and certainly, not a sacrifice. Rather, it is a privilege to extend a token of our appreciation with a pat on the back and the words 'well done, Buddy.'"

'Glad to Lend a Little Cheer'

In conclusion, the letter urged: "We should, all of us, be wholeheartedly glad to lend a little cheer to our returning service men and to help make their lot easier. Will you please reassert that you are behind them 100 per cent by contributing to this fund?" The typewritten letter bore the initials and in some cases the last names of the donors.

The Washington housewives who sell cosmetics during their spare hours for the local office of the Avon Products, Inc., sent in $20 to the fund.

The names of additional donors to the fund were announced yesterday as follows:

EAL Orders 25 Million in New Airliners

By S. Oliver Goodman

Eastern Air Lines yesterday announced a 25 million dollars expansion program involving tme purchase of multiengined Curtis Commando transports and Douglas DC-4s.

Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, president of EAL, said that the contracts had been signed with the respective aviation manufacturers and that it was hoped that Eastern will begin operation of high speed twin engine Commandos by fall of 1945, war conditions permitting, and of four-engine DC-4s as soon thereafter as possible.

The new equipment will make it possible to multiply plane mileage by five times in a three-year period of Eastern Air Lines' domestic and international expansion program. This constitutes approximately 50 per cent of an overall five-year expansion plan.

Captain Rickenbacker said that Eastern's new Commando Silverliners will be equipped with giant 18-cylinder Wright Cyclones, the engines which roar defiance as the B-29 Superfortresses blast the heart of Japanese industry.

The big new four-engined DC-4s which Eastern is purchasing are the commercial version of the famous C-54s which have performed in global military air transport.

Bond Redemptions Slow Down

A decided slow down in the number of persons cashing in war bonds was reported yesterday by Washington banks after an unexpected rush Monday.

The conversion of bonds into cash was described as "heavy but not alarming" by one banker who added that the majority of the bonds were of small denomination. Monday was the first opportunity for bondholders to turn them in through banks under a simplified Treasury procedure and obtain cash without delay.

Monday's rush was attributed to a delay in usual September redemptions in order to take advantage of the new system.

Callahan Essay Medal Creater By Alexandria Junior Chamber

Creation of the Charles H. Callahan essay medal for George Washington High School in honor of the late commissioner of revenue in Alexandria for 48 years and author of the biography, "George Washington, the Man and the Mason," was announced yesterday by the board of directors of the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce.

CALLAHAN

The award will be made annually. It will be presented for the first time at the spring commencement exercises at the high school in Alexandria to the student in the junior or senior class who submits the best written essay on George Washington or Robert E. Lee.

Charles D. Pulman, president of the Junior Chamber, said that arrangements were made through the Alexandria school board. Dr. A. L. Phillips and Joseph Saunders, jr., members of the Junior Chamber, have been appointed to form a committee with Mrs. Catherine Malone of George Washington High School to administer the first award.

The Jaycees directors said that the medal will honor Callahan's achievements, not only as a citizen, but as an outstanding Mason. Callahan died July 31 of this year.

Nationally known as a Mason, he was a founder of the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Association organized in 1910, and wrote his book on George Washington in 1913 as a memorial to raise funds for the five million dollar National Masonic Temple on Shooter's Hill in Alexandria in which interior construction is still being carried on. The volume has sold 20,000 copies and gone through five editions.

This year on February 22, he was honored in a George Washington's birthday celebration when a bust of him by Bryant Baker, London-born sculptor of European royalty and American statesmen, was unveiled at the temple by the Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, of which Callahan was master in 1910 and 1911.

One hundred and forty thousand acres of timber in LeFlore county is included in the Ouachita National Park.

In 1939 the Coast Guard saved $63,000,000 worth of vessels and cargo.

Pay Boost Approved For Md. Bus Drivers

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 3. (AP).—An increase of two and a half cents per hour for approximately 140 bus operators and maintenance employes of the Blue Ridge Transportation Company, retroactive to August 1, 1943, has been approved by the Regional War Labor Board at Philadelphia.

Lifer's Third Try To Escape Foiled By Md. Guard

Baltimore, Oct. 3 (AP).—Jack Hart, life-termer who twice has made his way to freedom from the Maryland Penitentiary, was frustrated in still another attempt to escape when a hacksaw blade penetrating the top of his cage touched a guard's toe, prison officials said today.

Hart, 57, who was sentenced 22 years ago for the murder of William B. Norris, had begun to cut his way through the ceiling of his cell, with only open space between the ceiling and the penitentiary's steel roof.

Warden Patrick J. Brady said Hart made his latest try while music from a floor below helped drown the sound of the hacksaw cutting through the lead and steel top of Hart's isolation cage.

The guard, Gordon Jordan, sounded an alarm when the hacksaw blade touched his foot while he was making his rounds. Hart then was moved to another isolation cage.

Smith Assails U. S. Pressure On Virginians in Fund Drive

Informed that the Alexandria Home and War Fund drive is being slowed down by residents employed in the District who believe they are obligated to support their Washington office quotas, Representative Howard Worth Smith, sr., (D., Va.) yesterday "condemned coercive efforts by individuals in Government offices to compel Alexandria employes to contribute in Washington."

"It can be authoritatively stated that no Government agency has any power, authority or right to coerce any employe into contributing to either the Washington or the Alexandria Chest or to make any contribution whatsoever," Smith said.

He said pressure methods should be reported to the employe's superior officer and that he too, should be gald to be the informer on any such incident.

"Both the Washington Chest and the Alexandria Chest are worthy causes that should appeal to the generosity of all citizens. There is no conflict, competition or jealousy in the common cause of the National War Fund, which has joined Community Chests throughout the Nation in this year's drive," Smith added.

Yesterday the campaign for $118,701.33 extending through October 12 was at the halfway mark. Workers met last night at the USO Drop-In Center, 115 North Washington st., for the second report meeting.

A report on the total to date is expected today when tabulation of last night's receipts is completed. This year the drive is being conducted for 12 agencies of the Alexandria Community Chest and 22 agencies of the National War Fund.

Fewer people are moving this year. But "moving day" is a good reminder to all of us that we ought to ransack our attics, cellars, garages and closets for old paper. We'll probably be surprised to see how much we discover. Paper is the most critical war shortage in America today.

More than 700,000 different items being sent to our Armed Forces are packed in paper and cardboard. That puts a terrible strain on the limited supply. Old paper can be used again to make new paper. COLLECT YOUR OLD PAPER FOR THE PAPER SALVAGE!

Though all U. S. magazines use only 4% of our paper supply, they afford two ways for you to help: First, share your copies with others, for magazines are limited as to the number of copies they may print. Second, salvage all old magazines . . . along with other paper products.

Browns Select Galehouse to Pitch Opener

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Oct. 3—Truth to tell this World Series that's coming up may be merely an anti-climax to the frenzier last week of the American League pennant race. The high pitch of the goings-on at Detroit and in the Brown's park in those final days when the pennant was riding on every ball thrown was more feverish than most World Series.

POVICH

Like the World Series, which traditionally produces as its hero one of the lesser lights of the contending teams, the final delirious week of the flag battle of the Tigers and Browns brought a headline name out of comparative security. It was not Dizzy Trout or Hal Newhouser or Dick Wakefield of the Tigers who crashed through to new fame, or yet one of the Browns' regulars. The man of the week was Chet Laabs.

They'll remember the down-to-the-wire pennant triumph of the Browns in the years to come, in terms of the Laabs fellow, five-foot-eight-inch outfielder who had been benched for light hitting, paradoxically. All he did in the last four games after being returned to the line-up was to hit a home run that won a 1-0 game three days before the season ended and then belt two homers on the final day, each with a man on base, to clinch the flag for the Browns.

Despite those heroics, Laabs finished the season with only a .233 average. He played in only 65 games and in many of them merely as a pinch hitter. There probably would have been no Laabs present in the Browns' line-up in that last week had it not been for the Washington club, incidentally.

When the Nats moved into St. Louis on September 19 and knocked the Browns off with a shutout performance by Johnny Niggeling for 11 innings, the defeat dropped the St. Louis club a game and a half behind the Tigers. The next day, the Nats pitched Mickey Haefner, a left-hander. Manager Luke Sewell was frantic about th Browns' lack of hitting by this time. It was in desperation that he called Laabs off the bench and started him in left field. That night he made three hits off the Washington pitching and they never did get him out of the Browns' line-up.

The paradox is that Laabs came to the Browns from the Tigers back iin 1939 in a ten-player swap. He was one of the lesser lights in the Buck Newsom deal of that year. Five years later the Tigers were to learn that the fellow they were cutting loose would turn up as the man who would beat them out of the pennant.

Laabs has always been a home-run threat, incidentally, but his weakness against certain types of pitching kept him out of the regular line-up both with the Tigers and the Browns. Power is packed into his 5-foot-8-inch frame, but pitchers knew he had a blind spot. When Bob Feller set the American League strikeout record of 18 victims in a single game a few years back against the Tigers, Laabs was one of the fellows he struck out five times that day.

We remember a session in the Nats hotel a few years ago when the subject of Laabs' hitting was the topic. It was agreed that he was a good outfielder and had power, "but he can be pitched to," said Jimmy DeShong, then on the Nats staff.

"I can strike that guy out any time I want to," said DeShong. "Al you have to do is pitch him 'tight.'" In the ball players' vernacular, that means a fast ball a bit inside and across the chest. "Watch me tomorrow," said DeShong, "and I'll show you what I mean."

The next day, DeShong was pitchiing for the Nats. He demonstrated completely what he had meant. He pitched Laabs "tight" and fanned him on the fellow's four trips to the plate. And DeShong was never rated a great pitcher, just a smart one.

If the Browns had lost the pennant, they could have traced their failure to one player in the league, more than any other. He is Stan Spence, who is the reason why the Browns lost nine games to the last-place Nats during the year. Spence habitually went on a batting rampage against St. Louis pitching. The year before, he had hit 9 of his total 12 home runs against the St. Louis club. This season he won at least five games from the Browns almost singlehandedly.

So it was some kind of compensation for the Browns when the same Spence upset the Detroit applecart in the last four games when the Nats split the series and knockd the Tigers out of the pennant. Spence was the driving force in both victories with home runs that beat Dizzy Trout.

Incidentally, the Tigers' failure to win was a $15,000 blow to Manager Steve O'Neill of the Detroit club. He would have received a World Series share of approximately $5000 and on top of that the $10,000 bonus that wealthy Walter O. Briggs, the owner of the team, traditionally gives to his pennant winning managers.

Surprise Selection Pits Part-Time Star Against Mort Cooper

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, Oct. 3.—Manager Luke Sewell of the Browns tossed an added sensation into St. Louis' World Series eve late this afternoon with the flabbergasting announcement that Dennis Galehouse, not Nelson Potter, would pitch tomorrow's opening game against the Cardinals.

Calmly emerging from a meeting with his players, Sewell confounded all predictions by announcing as his opening pitcher the man who had lost the only two games the Browns dropped in their last 13 games of the season. "It's Galehouse," he said, "and I think he'll do all right."

Galehouse, who will be pitching against Morton Cooper, the Cardinals' ace, has won only nine games this season and lost ten. Four regular pitchers on the Browns' staff have a better record than the 32-year-old right-hander. Research shows that not since 1929, when Howard Ehmke was Connie Mack's choice against the Cubs, has a pitcher started a series opener with as poor record as Galehouse's.

Sewell's choice daubed a Cinderella man touch into the series. Galehouse, now 32, has been buffeted about in his 10 years in the majors, released by both Cleveland and the Red Sox, and at the start of this season he was merely a part time pitcher, working for the Browns on Sundays when he got leave from his Akron, Ohio, war job.

Sewell Is Confident

The Browns' confidence in Galehouse, however, is high. "Don't foget," said Sewell, "he's the man who pitched us into a tie for the lead the day before the season ended by shutting out the Yankees, 2 to 0."

Galehouse, tall right-hander, is noted chiefly for his slider ball, a pitch that troubles all batters when it is near or over the plate. His long major-league experience, in contrast to the Browns' other pitchers, is believed to have been a factor in the choice of Galehouse with Sewell seeking a man who could exert a calm over what might be jittery tendencies of the Browns.

Meanwhile Manager Billy Southworth of the Cardials hewed to his determination to start big Cooper, winner of 22 games this year, with only 7 defeats. And the betting commissioners, who have established the Cardinals favorites at 1 to 2 to win the series are quoting those same odds on the Cards to win the opening game.

Scalpers Have Field Day

St. Louis' baseball hysteria, which blew a valve when the Browns clinched the pennant on the final day of the season, is scarcely abated as the all-St. Louis series opener nears. It's high carnival in the city's hotels and taverns tonight, and the ticket scalpers are having a field day with three-ticket strips of grandstand seats that have a list price of $18.75 selling for as high as $125.

Among the 35,000 who will fill Sportsman's Park to capacity, the Browns will be the heavy sentimental favorites what with this town tumbling over itself in admiration of the sensational struggle the American League team made for the pennant. Traditionally the Cardinal town, St. Louis has been taking the Cardinals for granted ever since mid-July when they stepped into a termendous lead and the pennant was only a matter of playing out the schedule.

In contrast to the pennant-hardened Cardinals who are in their eighth World Series, the Browns' players were a gabby lot in their limbering-up workout today. They talked of the thrill of being in the World Series in an attitude akin to a small-boy approach to the excitement, while the Cardinals scarcely murmured of the series as they went through their practice.

A topic of speculation in St. Louis tonight was the probably effect of the easy pennant conquest of the Cardinals and the furious finish of the Browns on the series play. The Browns are the club with momentum, while the Cardinals lazed through the final month of play, but opinion was divided on which would prove the better preparation for the series.

Cards Hold Mound Edge

Along with their better power hitting array of Stan Musial, Walker Cooper, Johnny Hopp and Whitey Kurowski, the Cardinals are conceded a pitching edge also by all except the died-hard Brownie fans. Cooper, who will be pitching to his brother in a third straight World Series, outrates Galehouse or any other Browns' pitcher on comparative records, but it is pointed out that he has not been a World Series success, winning only one of his four starts in 1942-43.

The only uncertainty in the Cardinals' line-up concerns leftfield where Danny Litwhiler may be replaced by Augie Bergamo. Litwhiler is suffering from a lame leg, injured by a foul off his own bat a week ago, but it is expected that he will start the series.

Remember Those Homers

For every member of the Browns, it will be their first World Series experience, but their game battle for the American League pennant has not alarmed their supporters on that score. The Browns' followers point to the home run habits of Vernon Stephens and Chet Laabs, plus the sometimes power hitting of George McQuinn and Gene Moore.

Only at shortstop where Stephens plyas, and in one outfield position, can the Browns present a better batting average than the Cardinals, but at shortstop the Cards admit no weakness. That's the position where Marty Marion plays and he is called by baseball men generally "the finest shortstop since Hans Wagner."

Manager Sewell, who has habitually shifted his outfielders all season is stringing along in the World Series opener with the three men who played in the pennant-clinching game—Mike Kreevich, Chet Laabs and Gene Moore. Until the last two weeks of the season, neither Laabs or Moore were regulars, but Sewell is in no mood to break up the outfield that brought the Browns their first pennant since the American League was established.

Higgins Fears Navy After Preflight Loss

State College, Pa., Oct. 3 (AP). Coach Bob Higgins of the Penn State football team wishes that North Carolina Preflight hadn't been so rough on Navy last Saturday.

"A Navy victory was what we needed," he said today, "to do anything against the Middies. Now, we'll catch them on the rebound—and you know what that means."

Penn State travels to Annapolis Saturday to meet Navy, which suffered a 21-14 defeat at the hands of the Pre-Flighters, while the State College Lions were impressive in their 58-0 win over Muhlenberg.

"Of course I liked the way he looked," Higgins said. "There were the usual first-game mistakes, and our freshmen were none too steady, but the performance was encouraging.

"But now, think of the mood many will be in when he hit Annapolis."

Navy was pressed to beat Penn State last year, 14 to 6, in a rainstorm. The Nittany Lions and Middies have played 20 games in their series that began in 1894, with Navy winning 11, Penn State 7, with 2 ties.

Series Sidelights:

Zarilla Promises Cardinals Will See Some Real Pitching

By F. W. Crawford

St. Louis, Oct. 3 (AP).—First and friskiest Cardinal to poke his head out of the Redbird dugout at today's workout was John (Pepper) Martin, 40-year-old "rookie," raring to go in his fifth World Series.

Joe Sewell, a bit plumper than when he played third base for the Yankees, came up for the series and to see "what kind of a ball club" brother Luke has. "Anyway they are the best in the American League," said Joe, who has a farm and hardware business in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Al Zarilla, the Browns' 24-year-old early season hitting sensation, says the Cards are "going to see some real pitching" in this series.

"Galehouse is big and strong. He can come back again after pitching the first game. And Potter, Kramer, and Jakucki are just as good," Zarilla declared.

Sergt. Enos Slaughter, hard-hitting Redbird outfielder on furlough from his Army station at San Antonio, Tex., pitched batting practice for the Cards. "Who ees that guy?" mocked Coach Mike Gonzalez. "Ees he the one who wait for the runner to go home and then throw heem out by 10 feet? Seem I see heem somewhere before."

Luke Sewell, Browns' manager, is one of several on the roster who have baseball playing brothers. Catcher Frank Mancuso is a brother of Gus Mancuso, New York Giant receiver. Myron Hayworth, who will catch the first game, also has a brother backstop — Ray Hayworth of the Dodgers, and Mike Kreevich has a brother, John, on the Oakland club in the Pacific Coast League.

Groundskeeper Bill Stocksick, who has had a hard time keeping Sportsmans Park in good shape with both St. Louis clubs using the field, did a job of resodding in record time.

Luke Sewell won out in the rival managers' housing difficulties. Sewell and Skipper Billy Southworth of the Cards lived in the same apartment during the season. When the Browns were on the road, Southworth moved in, and vice versa. Sewell was in the apartment when the season ended and exercised "squatter's rights." Southworth moved to a hotel.

Va. Practices Offensively for Mountaineers

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 3.—Virginia's football squad spent this afternoon sharpening up its attack in preparatoin for playing West Virginia in Charleston next Saturday. Coach Murray put all his squad through a long offensive drill.

The Cavalier coaches are convinced that they must prepare the Virginians to attack as soon as they get the ball, and to keep their offensive moving at every opportunity. Last Saturday's frank contest has convinced them that nothing can be left to chance.

The West Virginia team, which rolled over Case with ease last Saturday, has had two opportunities to play against the T-formation which the Cavalier will use. Both the Pittsburgh team, which won over the Mountaineers in an opening game, and the Clevelanders run their attacks from the T and the Morgantown boys will know how to deploy theri defense against it.

Lineup to Stand

Coach Murray hasn't given any indication whether or not he will make any shifts in the startig lineup for the game with West Virginia. This afternoon he used several backfield combinations behind the first team line. But the changes were all in the manner of experiments.

Bill Hickman, former Maryland varsity back, and (Whitey) Michels, who played for Charleston high school last year, were the two best ground gainers against N. C. State. Both these men had a chance today to show what they could do behind the varsity line.

Hickman and Michels are both triple threat backs whose presence in the backfield would give Virginia an opportunity for attacking variations. Either lad may break into the starting lineup.

Two Carolina Schools Raise Bid for Coach

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—Two rival units of the University of North Carolina stood ready to bid higher than ever before for high-powered coachiing talent in preparation for whatever football wars may come.

Both the original unit at Chapel Hill, home of the University Tarheels, and the branch here, North Carolina State College, lair of the Wolfpack, were authorized by the trustees last night to pay up to $12,000 for head coaches. The reported limit heretofore has been $8000 at Chapel Hill and $6500 at N. C. State.

Athletic authorities were silent today about what plans they might have for big-time competition but the trustees in voting the increased salary limit said it was done to make possible the hiring of a man who "would adequately perform the duties needed at the niversity of North Carolina," and at State.

By this ation, the two North Carolina colleges lined up with another member of the Southern Conference in indicating plans for extensive post-war activity. Maryland had previously announced plans for building a football stadium after the war to seat 50,000, and capable of expansion to 80,000 or 90,000.

Setting of the maximum at $12,000 recalled reports that Carl Snavely, who went to Cornell after a successful tenure at Carolina, had demanded that amount a few months ago when a movement was launched seeking his return. Reached at Ithaca, Snavely would make no statement about the possibility of his coming back but street-corner talk here and in Chapel Hill insisted he was not yet out of the picture.

President Frank P. Graham of the University, who unsuccessfully fathtered a plan to de-emphasize football a few years ago, was described as opposing the paying of a coach more than a regular department head. Graham's salary is $8250.

Indian Eleven In Scrimmage

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Coach R. N. (Rube) McCray put the William and Mary Indians through defensive measures against the powerful aerial attack of Hampden-Sydney in preparation for the game between the two teams at Richmond Friday night. The Tiger air assault, led by Tom Gorman, carried the boys from Death Valley to a 13-0 victory over Maryland last week.

Practice also included a scrimmage with the reserve team of Camp Peary. The drill was in a light drizzle.

McCray and his staff are worried over the Tiger squad, which has speed, a brilliant passing attack and plenty of reserve material. Injuries to the Indians in the game last week with the Fort Monroe gunners were negligible, although Tommy Thompson, first string center, has been favoring a sprained nakle, and Stanley Magdziak, in the backfield, may not see much action Friday night due to an early season injury.

The clash Friday will be a renewal of William and Mary's oldest football rivalry, which dates back to 1894 when the tribe first met the Tigers.

4-F's Hold Spotlight in World Series

By Bob Considine

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 3 (INS).—The third World Series of World War 2 opens in St. Louis tomorrow with a case of 4-F's and overage ball players, but little Sportsmans Park will be filled to the rafters and the word will spread to the ends of the earth, where American fans in uniform are fighting to keep such things as World Series alive.

It is strictly a St. Louis show, first of its kind in the 41-year history of World Series. The Cardinals are 11-to-20 favorites over the Browns, a curious band of has-beens and castoffs, who gallantly won their firm's first pennant last Sunday.

Denny Galehouse, a veteran failure with several American League clubs, will go to the mound for the Browns. The Cardinals had not yet named their starting pitcher.

Galehouse Will Start

Galehouse's 1944 record shows 9 wins against 10 defeats, which makes him the least renowned pitcher to start off a World Series since Connie Mack unveiled his secret weapon—old Howard Ehmke—n the opening game of the 1929 series between Philadelphia and Chicago.

All 35,000 tickets have been sold for the opening game. You could buy a couple out of the inside pockets of furtive speculators tonight—a la French postcards—for $10 a seat. Various Government agencies, including OPA and CDT, have representatives on hand to raise hell over food and travel violations.

The autocratic old boss of all ball players, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, is missing his first series since 1921. He is sick in Chicago.

The series amounts to this: A red-hot ball club (the Browns) which had to win 14 of its last 17 games to win the pennant is taking on a club which has had the pennant locked up almost since mid-season. The cards loafed home, the Browns had to drive all the way.

Sometimes the "all-out" club on to win, other times it never recovers from the psychological letdown that normally comes to a team which has achieved its pennant goal at the last possible moment.

Browns Appear Ready

The Browns appear to be in better condition physically. The Cards ailing list includes Danny Litwhiler, who has a bad knee; Stan Musial, the club's best hitter, a recent hospital case after a collision with Debs Garms; Walker Cooper, recovering from intestinal flue; Whitey Kurowski, who is getting over an ulcerated eye; Max Lanier, who has a bad arm and crink in the back; Ted Wilks, who is carrying around a cluster of stomach ulcers; Johnny Hopp, bad back, and Al Jurisich, who has some sort of misery which kept him off the last road trip.

Litwhiler worked out today, but may be forced to yield his outfield post to Augie Bergamo. Luke Sewell, the Alabaman who gave the Browns their first pennant, would answer no questions about why he picked Galehouse to pitch, instead of the expected choice, Nelson Potter.

"He's my man, that's all," Luke asserted.

Cooper has a 10-day rest. His last pitching chore was against the Phillies, a 16-inning job which he won, 4 to 3. The big, slightly bloated fellow was so tired after that one that for a full day he could not lift his right arm, but today he said he felt okay and expected to win.

Tommyhawk Ben Captures All-Age In Loudon Trials

Roundhill, Va., Oct. 3.—Tommyhawk Ben, a black and white setter belonging to E. C. Meade of Richmond and handled by Elgin Mininger, won the All-age Stake in the annual Loudoun Gun Dog Club field trials held on the farm of J. D. Thomas here today.

Second was Zero, a black and white setter, owned and handled by Virgil P. Hawse of Staunton, while Jody of Medford, a black and white pointer, owned by Dr. Joseph Fleitas of Medford, N. J., and handled by Country Christian, was third.

In the members' shooting stake, Hugo, a black and white pointer, owned by W. L. Calket and handled by Mininger, took honors, while second came Lawson's Carolina John, a lemon-white pointer, owned by W. B. Lawson of Arlington and handled by Mininger. Julius Marcey's of Washington Whirlaway Ferris Bob, a liver and white pointer handled by Jack Thomas, was third.

Some Reasons Why Brownies Will Win '44 World Series'

By Oscar Fraley

St. Louis, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The class will now come to order, children, and the topic of tonight's lecture by Professor Fraley will be "Why the St. Louis Browns will win the 1944 World Series."

It might be well to remind you, as this dissertation begins, that the professor is the same learned instructor who gave you such super-special serenades as:

"Why Diavolaw will win the 1944 Kentucky Derby."

"Why Washington will win the 1944 American League pennant."

"Why Cincinnati will win the 1944 National League pennant."

There were others, too, but modesty forbids too much of this sort o fboasting. Modesty and the fact that Diavolaw, Washington, Cincinnati et at did not win. Which, of course, is no fault of the professor's.

Bet on Brownies (He Says)

But as we come up to the World Series Wednesday it might be nice to know how to spend the few dollars left over from last night's poker game, and here's why you should wager on the Brownies.

Take that pitching staff for instance. There's Nelson Potter, who led the Nebraska State League in earned run averages a mere 10 years ago; 200-pound Denny Galehouse, all that meat and no potatoes; Jack Kramer, one of the best shipyard workers ever to chew tobacco, and Sig Jakucki, a paperhanger and painter who figures on doing a little whitewashing. All have been fairly successful in staying out of the lumber business.

But don't let yourself be convinced too easily. There's a lot more reasons. How about that infield? And for the information of the ladies, they're a handsome bunch of guys. There's Vernon (Junior) Stephens, handy at potato mashing; George McQuinn, a Scot who lives up to the clan's reputation when those balls start coming down the first base line; Don Gutteridge, who runs like a deer, only twice as fast, and Mark Christman, a guy with a kick like a Missouri mule.

Clincher in Outfield

After that you bump into the outfield, and here the professor finds the clincher. Chet Laabs is a son of a steel worker; Mike Kreevich, with the immortal distinction of having failed to make the grade with the Athletics, and Gene Moore is a fugitive from flatbush, which makes him a pretty sane sort of person.

Take the catchers. There's Frank Mancuso, who parachuted his way into Sportsman's Park, and Myron (Red) Hayworth, whose brother, Ray, was a major league catcher.

Donitas First Wins Feature At Belmont

Belmont Park, Oct. 3. (AP).—Henry Lustig's 3-year-old Donitas First, heroine of Aqueduct's Beldame Handicap, proved stoutest of the five contenders in the mile and a half Ladies Handicap, America's oldest stake for fillies and mares, here today.

A $3.90 for two choice for this 74th running, the bay daughter of Reaping Reward-Donita M. eased home with four lengths to spare, earning a purse of $11,100.

H. P. Headley's Letmenow was second, a length and a half in advance of Isidore Bieber's Moon Maiden. William Woodward's Thread O' Gold was a well beaten fourth. Then came Warren Wright's topweighted and disapointing mare Mar-Kell, which carried 126 pounds and found the route too far.

A crowd of 16,074, many glad to have their overcoats, saw Donitas First complete her long journey in 2:31 1-5 under 115 pounds, 100 the weight-for-age scale. Mar-Kell, a 5-year-old, was three above scale.

Ted Atkinson earned his 213th triumph of 1944 on the winner.

For almost a mile and a quarter, Letmenow and Mar-Kell appeared to have the race between them. They quickly sprinted far clear of Donitas First, Letmenow leading by a length or less during that span, while Mar-Kell opened up as much as 10 lengths of daylight over the ultimate winner. However, when they swung for the last turn, Atkinson urged the Lustig filly within a few lengths of the leaders. Once straightened for home, Donitas First pulled away from the tiring front runners, winning almost as her rider pleased. Letmenow was not menaced by the late bid of the elderly Moon Maiden.

Meyer's Broken Field Run Saves His Life

By Sergt. William Boniface, a Marine Corps combat correspondent, formerly of the Baltimore Sun. Distributed by the Associated Press.

Peleliu, Palau (Delayed).—Quentin (Monk) Meyer, starring left halfback of Yale's 1943 football team, made the most important "broken field run" of his career and added a 50-yard im during the first night of battling for this powerful Japanese base.

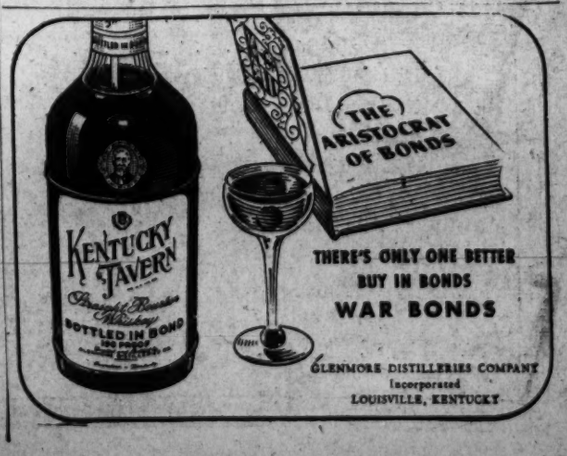
Now Second Lieutenant Meyer, eldest of four brothers of North Hampton, N. H., to be serving in the Marine Corps, "Monk" is a signalman whose job it is to scout along the shores of the invaded area and direct naval gunfire, keeping in contact with cruisers and destroyers by shortwave radio.

Out in front of marine lines when night fell on the first day of battle for this island, Lieutenant Myer found himself cut off from his main observation post by a Jap-infested, coral point extending out across the high-water roof.

After hiding his equipment behind a coral rock, Meyer surprised enemy snipers with a run across the beach and out into the ocean. By swimming a hundred yards out from shore and 300 yards up the coastline, he reached the safety of the front lines of the marines moving up the length of the island.

(Monk) remained with the infantry until the Japs were driven from the numerous caves of the point the following morning and then reutrned to his radio, which was unharmed.

In a waterproof case strapped to Meyer's side during his swim to safety were messages giving the location of Japanese shore gun emplacements. This information was relayed to our ships which pounded the strongholds during the night and early morning.



Salto Easy Victor at Laurel

Ray Arduini Is Injured In Seventh

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 3.—William Helis, heavy investor in horse flesh, received a return on his money today when his Salto was an easy winner of the Luke Purse, featuring the Tuesday program here. Making his first appearance at this track, Salto coasted home three lengths in advance of the closest opposition, much to the delight of favorite players in a crowd of 7000 braving some of the worst weather of the long meeting.

Second to the fleet son of Neddie and Sunayr was D. F. Bowman's Hialeah. Four additional lengths back came Dr. G. T. Strothers' Twotimer to be third. Three others competed in the test of six furlongs.

Rain, which began last night, was still falling as the program progressed, but Salto slipped along the six furlongs of sloppy track in 1:14 4/5, creditable time under the conditions. Jockey Nick Jemas, contract rider for Helis, was aboard Salto a $3.60-to-$2 proposition.

Salto Leads All the Way

Salto went to the front in the opening jumps and held sway thereafter. Hialeah, in slight trouble early ame through on the rail and put up a game battle but Salto drew away through the stretch seemingly without effort.

Apprentice Jockey Ray Arduini, Washington rider, suffered a slight brain concussion when he fell from the back of Eddie DeCamillis' Jaconda in the stretch run of the seventh race. The boy hit the fence near the eighth pole and was knocked out for several minutes.

Astral, a big son of Sun Beau and owned by John A. Manfuso of Washington, was a four length winner of the rae under Jokey Doug Dodson's handling. Joe Tucci's O'Goody took the place by a nose from Stanford Stud Farms' Dancing Archie. Astral paid $9.40 and was clocked in 150 1/5 for the mile and 70 yards.

Glen Riddle Farms' Fortify had to survive a claim of foul before being officially the winner of the fourth race, the day's fourth straight sprint. M. B. Goff's Director finished second with Cedar Farm's Lubra third in the group of seven. Apprentice Len Bowers who rode Director made the objection against Jockey Henri Mora pilot of Fortify. The latter bore out in the stretch but appeared to be clear of her rival. Fortify was a $8.80 favorite and was clocked in 115 3/5.

Alan T. Clarke's Walter Haight, prominent on the smaller tracks won for the first time on a mile oval in the second race under good riding by Jockey Danny Scocca, Washington boy. The son of Mowlee came to the outside and wore down Louisiana Farm's Frontier Jane to take a half length victory in a photo finish. Third money went to V. S. McClintock's Queen Minatoka. The winner paid $20.40 and was cloaked in 117 2/5 for the six furlongs and completed a $123.20 daily double.

VMI Practices Pass Defense

Lexington, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Pointing for their State championship clash with the University of Richmond at Richmond Saturday, the VMI Cadets concentrated on a passing session in the rain today, emphasis being placed on defensive tactics against the Spider aerial attack.

Coach Pooley Hubert said the Spider pass plays as executed by the B team had proved troublesome to the varsity and that more time would have to be spent checking defensive tactics tomorrow.

Ernest Quisenberry, 188-pound tackle from Roanoke, was shifted to end today in an effort to strengthen flank play. Two guards, Johnny Burton of Richmond and Paul Applin of Fort Worth, Tex., missed practice because of colds, but are expected to be ready for Richmond Saturday.

After 18 Months' Close Friendship, Widow Digs Admission From Widower That Marriage Isn't on His Mind; Ought She Give Him Up?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widow, 48 years of age. During the last year and a half, a widower my age,—a friend of 10 years' acquaintance,—has been calling on me regularly. He is a man of the finest character, I am self-supporting and have been making my home with a relative since my husband's death, five years ago. I have been hoping this friendship would mature into marriage eventually, as persons our age look for companionship.

A few weeks ago, I undertook in a diplomatic way to learn from my friend if he had ever thought to remarry. Much to my surprise, he told me he had hardly any freedom in his 20 years' marriage and said he thought he had a fear of remarrying, although (he added) later in life he may be sorry and regret his present attitude. He also said I would be his choice if he ever considered second marriage; but he does not think it fair to hold on to me when his intentions are so indefinite.

I care very much for him. My devotion is growing as time goes on. I really don't know if it's wise to try to hold him, now that he has laid his cards on the table. Friends are asking me when we're going to get married and this sort of puts me on the spot. Should I continue as usual? See less of him? Or give him up entirely? I would appreciate your advice. A. N. B.

Just Remember Why Men Marry

DEAR A. N. B.: All right, now you know where your beau thinks he stands. But it does not necessarily follow that you have reached a dead-end with him. Men are creatures of habit to a greater degree, even, than women; and habits which contribute to their comfort become more dear to them, and harder to break, as they settle into the groove of "life after fifty." Now, if you and the widower are so compatible that your devotion to him is growing stronger after 18 months' association, you may be sure that he feels a deepening fondness for you, too,—if only because (from his viewpoint) you have the good sense to appreciate what a fine man he is.

However, even the best of men marry mostly for selfish reasons. They marry to benefit themselves, or so they think; and not to be handsomely obliging,—no matter how often, or how late in life, they marry. Their only urge stronger than the diehard instinct "to be free," is the urge to grab and to hold such items as they deem important to their prestige or lasting comfort. For these things, they will pay the asking price,—and they foot the bill with greater alacrity and a greatr sense of satisfaction when they think they're bidding against competition; or if they fancy they forced the deal.

Stodgy Attitude Defeats Purpose

HAVING enlisted the widower's interest, you settled down to a stodgy routine to await a proposal of marriage,—letting him see plainly that you were waiting for him to speak. That attitude on your part would naturally throw him on the defensive. Now that he has frankly confessed "indefinite intentions," it is your cue to add more strings to your bow and thus redeem your mistake. Keep him as a friend, by all means. Tell him gaily that if he can't be serious, then at least you can both be giddy;—and how's about getting out more and having a lot of fun together.

With the backing of his companionship, you can go more places and get asked more places than if you were strictly a woman alone. So, instead of giving up hope and drawing into your shell, make the most of what you have. Set a livelier social pace and swing him into it as your partner. Use your head and the contacts you already have to build up a varied program he will enjoy; and that will steadily add to your list of friends,—thus (1) avoiding stagnation; (2) taking him off the defensive, while giving new fillip to your relations; and (3) automatically, by the law of averages, increasing your chances of catching other beaux. And this last item is the chief reinforcement you need, to woe him eating out of your hand.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Meals Planned Ahead Require Little Time

If you are one of the busy women who go to business, serve at a canteen, are a nurse's aide, or carry on any one of the many jobs women are now filling, in addition to home duties, you know there is little time for preparing meals.

Martha Ellyn

But with planning, some dishes can be prepared a day ahead and be ready at serving time. A Chocolate Crumb Cake is such a dessert. It is an unbaked cake, yet packed with the same nourishing goodness as a milk pudding. This is the kind of a dessert that will take the humdrum out of meal planning. This is also a company dessert. Why not plan this menu and you'll have a delicious as well as an easy meal to prepare?

DINNER MENU

Chilled Vegetable Juice
Deviled Crab — Fresh Peas
Lattice Potatoes — Salad
Hot Rolls — Jeach Jam
Chocolate Crumb Cake — Coffee

The deviled crab doesn't take long to prepare as it need bake but 15 minutes. Use quick-frozen peas to save time. The vegetable juice can be in the refrigerator chilling and then with the lattice potatoes to prepare, the rolls to heat while the coffee is brewing, you'll have a delicious meal in record time. The recipes for Deviled Crab and the Chocolate Crumb Cake follow:

DEVILED CRAB

Prepare crab meat to make 2½ cupfuls. Remove hard membrane. Add to crab meat ¼ cup chopped mushrooms, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and 1 teaspoon finely chopped onion. Melt 3 tablespoons butter or margarine in saucepan. Add 3 tablespoons flour, stirring until smooth. Add 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, dash of red pepper, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon salt. Gradually add 1 cup milk, stirring constantly. Cook until mixture thickens. Add to crab meat. Fill buttered shells or ramekins with mixture. Roll 2 cups cornflakes into fine crumbs, combine with 1 egg yolk, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cover crab meat mixture with crumbs. Dot with butter or margarine and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in moderately hot oven, 400 degrees, about 15 minutes or until golden brown. Serves 6.

CHOCOLATE CRUMB CAKE

Crush 18 chocolate wafers with rolling pin. This amount should make 1½ cups full. Combine with ¼ cup melted butter and a dash of salt. Press firmly onto sides and bottom of buttered spring-form or straight sided pan. Set in refrigerator to chill. Add 2 cups milk to 3 tablespoons cornstarch which has been combined with ¼ cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add this mixture to 3 slightly beaten egg yolks in top of double boiler. Cook over hot water until mixture is smooth and thickened, stirring constantly. Soften 1 envelope unflavored gelatin in 3 tablespoons cold water and set in pan of boiling water to melt. Add to custard. Remove from heat and fold in 3 stiffly beaten egg whites with ¼ cup sugar added to them. Cool, add 1½ teaspoons vanilla and ½ cup finely chopped nut meats. Pour into crumb-lined pan. Grate chocolate over top. Set in refrigerater for 3 or 4 hours or until firm. Serves 8.

Arlington VFW Service Club Gains Support

Arlington-Fairfax Bureau, The Post, 1040 No. Buchanan St. Tel. CH. 3239.

Contributions are being received daily for the Veterans Service Club, sponsored by the John Lyon Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Arlington, which will be built at 21st and No. Brandywine streets in Arlington.

The club, dedicated to veterans of all wars, will contain what its sponsors believe will be the largest ballroom in the county, with a place for an elevated stage; several lounges, a club room and a refreshment bar.

Members of the Arlington Post said yesterday that it was planned to let other organizations in the county use the ball room for social functions.

Goal set in a "buy a brick for a dollar" campaign initiated to raise funds for the project is $25,000.

Received yesterday was a $50 donation from George W. Tiddler, past post commander while Erma M. Riley purchased 10 bricks, to be dedicated to CPO Willard T. Riley, Laura Virginia Snowden purchased five bricks, to be dedicated to Edward Lee Snowden; John H. Seale purchased two bricks, each to be dedicated to Robert H. Seale and James A. Seale.

All names submitted for dedication will appear on a permanent honor roll to be placed in the building. Contributions toward the fund should b e sent to William W. Burnett, 5213 N. 12th st., Arlington.

Spanish Students

Geraldine Warren, 4613 S. 31st rd., Arlington, a junior at Grinnell College, was one of ten students w[illegible]e chosen as Spanish laboratory assistants at the school. Selection was on the basis of outstanding work in her study of language. As a laboratory assistant, Miss Warren will do practice teaching of Spanish at the college level, under the immediate supervision of a staff member.

Must Post OPA Charts

Earl Young, chairman of the Food Price Panel of the Arlington War Price and Rationing Board, 48-7, has issued a notice to merchants of the county that the charts and posters mailed them by the local OPA office must be mounted conspicuously, and made available to the customer. Chairman Young said that he realizes that sometimes mail is unread by a busy grocer, but the information contained therein could be of the utmost importance.

Recent legislation grants more power to local panels and permits them to impose sanctions for noncompliance with regulations, he further stated. These sanctions range from the moderate to very strong and the local Food Panel feels that all merchants should have a thorough understanding by now of the seriousness of violating these simple regulations. Additional information may be obtained by calling OPA Price Division, OXford 3368.

Lyon Post Mails Sweets

'Sweet" boxes for its 157 servicemen and women who are serving overseas are being mailed out this week by the John Lyon Post and Ladies' Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Arlington.

The boxes will contain fruit cake, donated by war mothers, as well as candy, cigarettes and writing materials. Preparation of the boxes has been under the chairmanship of Mrs. Mary Spear of the post auxiliary.

Japanese Slur Allies In Propaganda

St. Paul, Minn. (U.P.)—Crude propaganda cartoons, intended to dishearten the American soldier and to create disunity between Australians and Americans often are left behind by the Japanese in their retreats, according to Morton A. Tankenoff, St. Paul, PT boat radioman.

Tankenoff sent home two of the leaflet pictures. One showed the body of a United States soldier, fallen across a miniature New Guinea, with a citation from Gen. Douglas MacArthur pinned to his uniform.

Underneath was the lettering: "Killed in action. Died that the jungles of New Guinea might again rest in peace."

The other depicts a spectral Roosevelt, ordering: "Thou shalt go, Americans, and eat the Australians out of their homes if necessary. The Americans will fight to the last Australian."

Tankenoff said that the Yanks placed the same value on the cartoons that they affixed to a statement by a captured Japanese that he and his comrades had been living on California food shipped from captured San Francisco.

Soldier Hangs Self

Frederick, Md., Oct. 3.—The body of Sergt Gerard Edouard De-Montigny, Montreal, Que., stationed with a U. S. Army unit at Camp Ritchie, Md., was found hanging in his room in a local hotel today. The county medical examiner gave a verdict of suicide and said the soldier had apparently been dead for several days. The body was turned over to military authorities.

Wins Job Back, Resigns

Van Buren, Ark. (U.P.)—It took Rufus Matlock two years of legal battling—clear to the State Supreme Court—to win reinstatement as police chief here. But he finally emerged victorious—only to resign voluntarily. Reason—he is running for sheriff of Crawford County, home bailiwick of radio's Bob Burns.

In January, 1944, there were 22,169 persons employed on work relief projects in Puerto Rico.

"I used to take orders from him!"

"From him? What were you, Dad, anyway—a bus boy?"

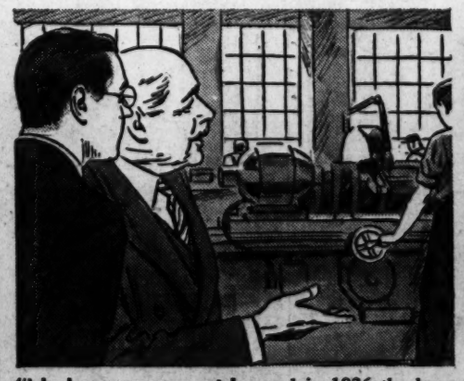
"Not quite! He was foreman in the machine shop where I got my start. It was many years ago . . .

"... it was wartime, labor was scarce and wages were sky high. Naturally, I wanted to do something, but with my bad eyes, I couldn't get into the Army, so I went to work turning out shells. I guess I was about twenty or twenty-one years old.

"The foreman was a fellow named George Dill. He knew his stuff, but he was more interested in having a good time. Some days, when he'd been out on the town, he wouldn't show up at all. He was a high-roller, and the boss knew it.

"In 1918, the boom ended. We stopped making shells and things slowed up. George was one of the first to lose out. I was sorry for him, especially since he hadn't saved a cent, but everyone knew he had it coming to him. I took over his job.



"I had some money put by, and in 1926 the boss offered me a small share in the business. I bought in, and later on when the old man died, I acquired control. I never did know what became of George. He just dropped out of sight—until three minutes ago.

"There's an object-lesson for you, Ted! Take a tip from the Government and put your money in War Bonds, life insurance and a savings account. It's an uncertain world, and you never know when you're going to need a backlog."

THE financial health of America as a whole depends upon the financial health of every individual. This in turn depends largely upon how much each of us knows about the part he must play in the general economic picture for his own best interests and in the best interests of his country.

Recognizing this, America's Life Insurance Companies are sponsoring this educational program as a public service to the 68,000,000 owners of life insurance and to every American citizen.
